PREFACE.

At its annual meeting in March, 1898, the town of Sumner voted to observe its Centennial Anniversary, and made a small appropriation to defray the necessary expenses.

Former citizens of the town, with an inherent regard for the place of their nativity, generously added to the fund, with the result that when the Centennial was over and all expenses were paid, a small surplus was still left in the hands of the committee.

The question arose as to the disposition of this surplus, and this modest little volume is the answer.

While the limited sum at the disposal of the committee necessarily caused limitations in the volume, it is hoped that it will serve as a pleasant reminder of the day we celebrated, and at the same time perpetuate an important part of the early history of our town that might otherwise be lost to coming generations.

The thanks of the committee are especially due to Rev. Lucien M. Robinson of Philadelphia, who has rendered valuable assistance in the preparation and arrangement of the work, and to Mrs. L. B. Bisbee of Camden, Me., J. F. Cobb of Auburn, Prentiss Cummings of Boston, Mrs. J. L. Derby of South Weymouth, Mass., George R. Drake of West Medway, Mass., Mrs. Francetta Fletcher of South Paris, Mrs. George H. Hawes of Fall River, Mass., Hersey Heald of Sandwich, Mass., Ly-sander and A. C. Heald of South Weymouth, O. K. Gerrish of Lakeville, Mass., Freeland Howe of Norway, Mrs. Julia Pason of Medway, Mass., W. E. Pulsifer of New York, Wallace Ryerson of South Paris, J. H. Stetson of South Weymouth, Mass., J. Walter Stetson of Auburn, Gilbert Tuell of Bethel, Hiram Tuell of Milton, Mass., whose cash contributions made its publication possible. Also to John and Horatio G. Turner of Boston, for the gift to the town of a large and beautiful flag.

ADDRESS of WELCOME

— BY —

MRS. ADALINE H. STETSON.

It was a great surprise to me when informed that the committee of arrangements had assigned me this part in the exercises of the day. I said they would have to excuse me; most certainly they would till I remembered the littlest child in the family is always given the best place. Thanking them for this favor, I cheerfully accept my commission.

Thus, in behalf of the citizens of this town, I extend a cordial welcome to all visitors, and all who come to participate in the festivities and enjoyments of this Centennial Celebration. An especial welcome to the sons and daughters of old Sumner, those who have long been away and are come back to the scenes of their childhood, laden with precious memories of early years.

My heart speaks to you in words of another. "We who are old and about to die, salute you, hail you, take your hand in ours, and crown you with our welcome, as with flowers."

The great interest in all family gatherings and reunions is in retrospection; who does not love to talk of old times, old friends, and associations? Sometimes my old heart grows so warm even at the thought of them, ere I am aware I am singing:

“Backward, turn backward, oh! Time, in your flight;

Make me a child again, just for tonight.”

May we all, aroused by the spirit of the hour, enjoying so highly these ceremonies and pleasures, feel our youthful vigor renewed for a time, and look back with sweet remembrance to this festal day.

RESPONSE,

BY W. E. PULSIFER.

Mr. President, fellow-townsmen and friends:—

On behalf of the visitors and those who have come back to their old homes to help celebrate its centennial birthday, I extend to you our hearty thanks for this most beautiful and cordial welcome from one whom many of us have known as a mother in Israel.

The heart can never find expression through vocabularies or books. Neither can it ever be fittingly represented by speech. And so we sons and daughters of this rock-ribbed town who have gone out into the busy world to do and dare in our chosen vocations, are called back to the scenes of our childhood to meet those who have remained to care for the interests of the home, and help them fittingly celebrate a centennial anniversary, words can hardly portray the emotions we feel.

Every hill and valley, every pond and stream, every forest and meadow, every road and lane are sacred to our memories. Under the sunny skies and the twinkling stars of the night as children we have in these rural homes had our visions and dreamed our dreams. Here the pure air, the clear water, the plain but wholesome food nourished well the bodies and developed the brains of the men and women who going hence have honored the town that gave them birth.

The Maine man has been proverbial the world over for the strength of his spinal column; and I have thought that the granite of these hills must have in some inexplicable manner found its way into it. I hold the man fortunate who has had his birth and early training in a rural community like this. He learns some lessons never taught in books. "He knows how life unto experience looks." Here he is so trained that he forms habits of sobriety, industry and economy, without which no man can succeed. Here he sees living examples of sterling morality and true religion. Here he learns to respect the sacredness of the home and to hold inviolate the honor of his State and his country.

"Among the hills," Webster, the great defender of the constitution, was born, and hundreds of other men who have written their names high up on the scroll of their country's history first saw the light in the humble homes that dot the hillsides of glorious old New England.

A hundred years is a long time; it far more than measures the span of human life.

When Isaac Sturdivant called the first town meeting of Sumner after its incorporation, King George III was on the English throne, and the great Napoleon was changing the map of Europe. John Adams was President of the United States. The Constitution of the United States had been adopted eleven years before. Washington, the first president, had been inaugurated only nine years prior to this time, on the balcony of the Federal Building in Wall Street, New York.

In 1790, two years later, the city of Philadelphia, now having a population of over a million, then had about 42,000. New York, now having a population of three and a half millions, then was a city about the size of Lewiston and Auburn. Boston had but 18,000 people then, and Baltimore only 13,000. The total population of the country was about four millions, and we were then about on the level, or decidedly inferior in wealth and population to the small countries of Denmark, Portugal and Belgium. We were at that time a third rate power. On the other side of the Allegheny mountains there were only about 100,000 people, mostly in Tennessee and Kentucky, and the country was almost wholly occupied by Indians, where now the Great Empire of the West has its seat.

The occupations of the people in that day were extremely simple. There were few manufactures.

In the East there were many merchants, seamen and fishermen, but most of the people were farmers who lived upon what they raised on their own farms.

People seldom undertook long journeys and mails were not very regular. I could now come from New York here in sixteen hours. Then it would have taken nearly two weeks to make the journey by stage-coach. I should have been obliged to cross the Connecticut, the Merrimac, the Saco and the other rivers and large streams that could not have been forded, on ferry-boats, as there were no bridges across the larger streams.

The people in the various parts of the country knew very little about each other, and almost nothing about the people on the other side of the Atlantic. A man in those days who had been to Europe was looked upon with about as much curiosity as we should regard a human being who should now be privileged to visit the moon. "There's a man who has been to Europe," the envious people used to say.

There was then no cooking-stove, no furnace, no steam heating apparatus, no illuminating gas in this country, though in 1798 it was just being tried in England. No electric lights, no steamboats, no railroads, no telegraph nor ocean-cable, no telephone or any other application of electricity for the comfort and convenience of the people. There was no sewing machine, no mowing machine or reaper, no cotton-gin, no National Banks, no Clearing Houses, no systems of credits—none of these things existed even in the imagination of the inhabitants of this country in 1798 when this town was born.

If Dewey had one hundred years ago to-day stormed Manila, and you were living then, you might possibly have heard of it in a year if the sailing vessels that brought the news had a good voyage and you were lucky enough to get the Boston paper a week or so after its issue.

Think what has happened since this town was incorporated. You now cross the continent as quickly as our illustrious forefathers went—from Boston to New York, a distance of two hundred and thirty miles. You have your luxurious sleeper, your dining car, your barber shop, your writing room and your library on wheels, and you speed across country at the rate of sixty miles an hour. You read at your supper table the morning's news of the other side of the world. You whisper across the Atlantic in the flash of an eye to your friends in London; you stand in your Boston office and talk with your partner in New York or Washington as if he stood on the other side of the counter in your store. You light your house by touching an electric button. You propel your street cars without horses or steam but by a subtle fluid that has a power inconceivable. You issue your check and satisfy your creditor in California, and you do scores of other things that would astonish our good forefathers should they have a Rip Van Winkle awakening to-day, and give them good reason to think the millennium had indeed come. To-day this country has a wealth amounting to 87,000,000,000 of dollars, larger by considerable than the wealth of Great Britain, or the combined wealth of France and Germany, and is one third of the total wealth of all Europe.

My friends, we have been fortunate to live in the Golden Age of the world. What shall the future bring to us? Can as much progress be made in the coming century as in the last? Will another Longfellow sing his songs, another Emerson utter his philosophy, another Edison read the mysteries of nature? No man can tell; but I am sure that whatever the future may reveal for the good of mankind, the sons of Sumner will, as in the past, act well their part and do in their place and time the things that good men and women always find to do to help on the amelioration of humanity.

CENTENNIAL ODE.

(Written by W. Stanwood Field.)

Mountains, hills, and valleys,
And lakes and forests gay,
Since they named thee Sumner
A century's passed away.
Passed from the rush of the present
Back into memory's chain,
Gone are our boyhood's old pleasures,
Those years will not come again.

Hillsides covered with flowers,
And children filled thy door,
Babies grown to manhood
And many gone on before;
Sons and daughters have left thee
Faithful as histories tell;
Many are tilling your valleys,
Keeping and guarding thee well.

Sumner, dear old Sumner,
Be bright thy coming day,
Grand the future century
As this that's passed away.
Loyal may we be forever,
Faithfully seeking our crown,
True to ourselves and our kindred,
True to old Sumner our town.

HISTORICAL ADDRESS

— BY —

REV. LUCIEN MOORE ROBINSON.

“We walk today the halls of story,
Mid pictures of the olden time,
And voices, from an ancient glory
That charmes us like a silver chime.”

“A people which takes no pride in the noble achievements of remote ancestors, will never achieve anything worthy to be remembered by remote descendants.”

MACAULAY.

It is a sure mark of savagery and barbarism not to care for the past or provide for the future. The savage lives for his little day, and his horizon is bounded by his own life, he has no records of the past and knows not how he came to be where he is, and leaves no footprints on the sands of time, which in the future some brother man may see and take heart again. He lives in and for the present and for that alone, not knowing whence he came and caring little whither he goeth. But with the advent of civilization there comes a most marked change in the attitude of man toward his past history and his future reputation.

If we look to the oldest civilization of the world, in that wonderful mysterious valley of the Nile, there we find monuments of stone and records in the hardened clay, without which we of this day would be in total ignorance of a people whose arts and sciences are the wonder even of our boasted civilization.

All history is but a record of the past and no nation, or country, or family, can have a history unless their deeds and words have been preserved in enduring monuments, graven in brass, cut in polished stone, or written on parchment.

Gazing backward along the track of past ages of the world's history, we note with interest the changes wrought by the passage of time. We behold as in a magic mirror the mighty men of bygone times.

"We enter the tent of the general, talk with the philosopher, and listen to the poet." But amid that throng are also our own ancestors, and how eagerly do we scan the multitude to discern their forms, and how gladly would we question them as Dante or Virgil did of old, about their life while here in the flesh.

"We delight to examine into their character and actions and as we find them worthy or unworthy our hearts swell with pride or our cheeks glow with shame," we treasure up in memory their deeds and recall their sayings. The very instinct of our nature binds us to the past and links our fates with those of our forefathers. We are all children of the ages, inheritors of the past.

We meet today to commemorate a hundred years of the history of a town. A space of time short in comparison with the long ages of the past, yet the utmost span of one human life. And what a century it has been! To us it seems that this Nineteenth Century is the culmination of all civilization; in it the nations have made the greatest progress, the world has seen the most wonderful inventions, and the people of all nations have drawn closer together.

But the story of this town does not begin with the 13th of June 1798; that day, indeed, marks the ending of one epoch and the beginning of another. It was on that date that the vigorous young plantation received its freedom suit, and having reached its majority took its place among its fellow-members of that great Commonwealth, extending from Cape Cod to Nova Scotia.

Let us not forget, however, in our thanksgiving for a hundred years of growth and prosperity, those early days of struggle and hardship, when, like Israel of old, the land was yet to be subdued, when there was need of courageous hearts and strong hands, of perseverance and pluck, of earnest and almost ceaseless toil.

The story of these early years begins in that most important era of our country's history, the War for Independence. The sound of that "shot which was heard around the world," called forth from their quiet firesides those men who after seven years of fighting to win their freedom and establish in this western world a new "Republic of freemen," were to be the founders of this town; to set up here in the wilderness that "cradle of liberty," the New England town-meeting.

When the success of the war was assured the citizen soldiers returned to their homes, often to find them in a very unsettled state; the cultivation of the farm had been abandoned, the mill and the workshop were out of repair; they had been forced to receive their pay in paper money worth scarce a fortieth of its face value; the commercial and financial world was in confusion; it was a time of change.

For a century and a half previous to this, however, son had succeeded father in regular rotation on the lands of their ancestors, and there had been no inclination to wander from the old homestead. But now for seven years many of the younger men had tramped in the army from the northern wilderness of Maine and Canada to the great plains of New Jersey and Maryland, and the swamps of the Southland. A restless spirit was begotten in them which made them no longer content to sit by the old ancestral hearthstone.

These days immediately succeeding the War for Independence were days of emigration and new settlements in the wilderness which stretched almost unbroken from the shores of the Atlantic back to the St. Lawrence. But before describing the first settlement of our town, let us glance for a moment at the early history of that territory into which these hardy settlers came.

The French early claimed all these lands by right of discovery and settlement, and the King of France had made a grant of them, under the name of Arcadia, as early as 1603. But the English also claimed the territory under the same right of discovery and settlement, and King James included it in his grant of North Virginia in 1604. For the next century and a half there was almost a continuous struggle to determine which of these powerful nations should control the land on which we stand today. For one hundred and fifty years it was doubtful whether the issue would favor France, and this would be New France, or whether England would in the end make good her claim and establish a New England. The fortunes of war favored first one and then the other, and the land from which our town was later carved was alternately French and English soil.

In this long struggle the Indians usually took the part of the French, who had been most zealous in sending missionaries among them, and teaching them as a part of their creed, hatred of the English. The tales of heroism and bravery, of captivity and slavery, of burning houses and slaughtered colonists, of scalping knives and tomahawks, flint lock and cannon, forms one of the most thrilling parts of our national history. And this territory was the debatable ground. On the banks of the Androscoggin lived the most dreaded of the Indian tribes, the Anasagunticooks, with their blood thirsty chief, who boasted in the Council Chamber of France, before the French King, that with his own hand he had slain one hundred and fifty English. In return for this great benefit the King immediately knighted him, and made him a nobleman.

There was no safe dwelling place in this country until Wolfe met Montcalm on the heights of Abraham, and the fortunes of war (or rather let me say, He who watcheth over all) decided that this country should be the possession of the great English speaking race.

Then for a few years there was quiet, and settlers flocked into the new land. Some found their way up the Androscoggin as far as Livermore on the east, and others up the Saco to Fryeburg on the west.

But soon the mutterings of another storm put an end to this tide of immigration. The storm broke, and this country was again the barrier between two contending armies, but now, alas, of one blood! Up through the wilderness marched brave Benedict Arnold, with the vain hope of capturing Quebec. Better had it been for him if he had fallen, as Wolfe before him had done, in the attempt. Finally after years of fighting, peace again settled upon a free nation, but heavily loaded with debt and with greatly impaired credit. "The paper currency which had been floated along by hope and credulity and buoyed up by a spirit of patriotism, sunk in value, all confidence fled, and the war-worn soldier reluctantly yielded to the course of law which took from him his last penny and left his family beggars. Heavy taxes were laid to pay the interest on the public debt, which the people could not meet, and for the payment of which their cattle were distrained and they were otherwise reduced to extremities."

This is no fancy picture from imagination, but the very words of one who lived through these times that tried men's hearts, and was himself a prominent actor in them, the man whose name this town bears. To escape these ills men were ready to emigrate to new lands and find new homes. The great Commonwealth of Massachusetts encouraged these new settlements. She most naturally turned to that immense tract of land "to Eastward" which she had acquired by purchase and conquest, which was then nearly in the state of nature, a vast wooded wilderness; only a thin barrier of towns hugged the sea coast and straggled a little way up the banks of the great rivers, not reaching across the southern border of our state and scarcely extending inland at all.

A land office was soon established in Boston and notice given that these wild lands would be offered for sale and soldiers' notes or the consolidated securities of the Commonwealth taken in payment. The State offered to any one desirous of settling upon these new lands 150 acres anywhere upon the rivers or navigable waters at the small price of one dollar per acre. In any other portion of the vast domain the State promised to give 100 acres free to anyone who would clear sixteen acres in four years. This promise continued until 1784, and under it the first settlers came to this town.

Many companies were formed in different parts of the Commonwealth to purchase whole townships and promote emigration, hoping for great profits from the sale of lots. These companies petitioned the General Court for a grant of land, specifying the location. After the public survey the grant was usually made with certain restrictions. The Commonwealth prescribed that certain lots should be reserved for the first settled minister, grammar schools, and Harvard College, and sometimes other conditions were imposed on the Proprietors. These Proprietors were in most cases inhabitants of the same locality and held meetings to make arrangements for the opening up of their plantations and inducing settlers to enter upon the land. (Records of these meetings were preserved. *)

As early as January, 1781 a petition was sent to the General Court by Samuel Butterfield of Dunstable, Mass., and others, for land on the north of land petitioned for by Abijah Buck and others (now Buckfield), to the value of six miles square, "upon such considerations or for such sum as you in your wisdom shall think best for the good of this State, your petitioners being desirous of making a settlement on said land if granted, which would not only

This is the first reference to Samuel Butterfield, from whom the plantation took its name. He was a native of Dunstable, Massachusetts.

This petition was not granted, the land had not yet been surveyed and no bounds could be given. But in 1785 John Jordine surveyed for the State land in this vicinity, including the present town of Buckfield, then called "No. 5," and the southern half of the present Hartford and Sumner, which he called "No. 6," containing 23,000 acres.

The next year another government surveyor, Samuel Titcomb, continued the survey northward, and ran out the lines of another township, "No. 7," lying just north of "No. 6," and containing 24,000 acres.

On June 22, of that same year (1786) a Deed of Agreement was made between the State's committee and Joel Parkhurst of Dunstable and his associates, by which the Commonwealth agreed to deed the townships Nos. 6 and 7 on payment of the price agreed upon.

On November 22, in the following year, 1787, this deed was given to Ebenezer Bancroft of Dunstable, and his associates, who are all mentioned. The shares were made one sixtieth, and the names of the Proprietors with the number of shares each owned is as follows:

Samuel Butterfield, 5. John Merrill, 6. Ebenezer

* See Appendix, B

Bancroft, 3. Joel Parkhurst, 3. Benjamin French, 3. Joseph Danforth, 2. Oliver Cummings, 2. Ebenezer Allen, 2. The following had one share each:

James Abbott, Loammi Baldwin, Oliver Bailey, William Blodgett, Asa Butterfield, Leonard Butterfield, Peter Colburn, James Cummings, Jeremiah Cummings, Josiah Cummings, Oliver Cummings, Jr., Mary Emerson (widow), Frederick French, Thomas French, Apollos Hall, Benjamin Heald, Peter Hazelton, Benjamin Hosmer, Cyrus Hosmer, William Hunt, Israel Hutchinson, Nathaniel Jones, James Lawrence, Samuel Marsh, Samuel Pollard, Increase Robinson, Thomas Russell, Benjamin Smith, Benjamin Smith, Jr., Oliver Taylor, Asa Thompson, Benjamin Woodward, Joseph Winn, Jr., Richard Whitney.

These were the original owners of the soil of the two plantations, containing nearly fifty thousand acres, and their holdings ranged from five hundred to five thousand acres each. Among them were men of note, leaders in the events of their own time, and to them are to be traced nearly all titles to the farms in our town.

Six names represent the ownership of one half of the two townships; these are, Bancroft, Butterfield, Cummings, French, Merrill and Parkhurst.

Col. Ebenezer Bancroft was for many years the clerk of the Proprietors, and the meetings of the Proprietary government were held at his house in Dunstable, Mass. All the land about North Pond and the Pond itself was granted to him in recognition of his valuable services as Secretary. He was one of the committee in 1791, to lay off the one hundred acres to each of the original settlers.

Col. Bancroft was in command of a company at Bunker Hill where he was wounded.

He served through the war and at its close returned to Dunstable, where he died in 1828, in his ninetyeth year.

John Merrill was a public surveyor of lands for Gov. Bowdoin in the District of Maine. He thus became interested in the purchase of lands from the Commonwealth and was a shareholder in a number of such plantations. He was early at Topsham, and later removed to Farmington, Maine.

The Cummings family were among the oldest and most influential families of Dunstable. They were a large family, and five of them were among the Proprietors, and one of them an original settler of the Plantation; his grandson long lived at West Sumner, and was for nearly twenty years Postmaster in this village.

The Butterfields were also a very numerous family in Dunstable, and the names of three appear in the list of Proprietors. They were large owners, and the new township was named for them, East and West Butterfield.

The name of another of the Proprietors is a household word in England and America. Col. Loammi Baldwin, a Proprietor of this plantation, was the first propagator of the famous Baldwin apple.

As soon as the Proprietors received their deed, they made arrangements for lotting out the two plantations. Instead of taking the division line made by the public surveyor running through the center of the plantations east and west for ten and one half miles from Paris to Livermore, they made a new division line running north and south, leaving some eight thousand acres more in the east part than in the west.

This line dividing the two plantations ran due north and south, just east of the old Hezekiah Stetson and John Briggs farms, thus throwing the new settlement and mills at East Sumner into the East Plantation.

From this division line the committee ran out the lots, first running range lines north and south parallel to the division line. The lots in the two plantations were originally intended to be of the same size, containing one hundred and twenty five acres each, but later the lots in West Butterfield (Sumner) were made one hundred and thirty six acres, while those in East Butterfield (Hartford) remained one hundred and twenty five acres each.

There were one hundred thirty five lots in the West Plantation, and one hundred and seventy in the East besides numerous gores. *

These lots were laid out in the fall of 1786, and then were drawn by the Proprietors in proportion to their shares; a single share entitling its owner to about six hundred acres of land.

The "Propriety" held its meetings in Dunstable as late as 1804, but the original book of records has been lost. They employed Oliver Cummings, Jr. and others of the early settlers to build roads through the new plantation in order to open up their lots for sale, and they usually paid for such labor by grants of land.

Before 1804, it would seem that all the land had either been sold or assigned to the various Proprietors in severalty, as in that year the Proprietors ordered their clerk to have all sales and allotments of land in the two towns recorded in the Cumberland Registry of Deeds.* And thus ended the acts of the Proprietary governments.

Let us now return to the story of the earliest inhabitants, the founders and settlers. †

The first immigrants were all from the Old Colony of Massachusetts, from Plymouth County, and especially from Pembroke and the surrounding towns of Halifax, Plympton and Middleboro.

* See Appendix. A.

† A full account of these families will be found in the Lewiston Evening Journal of June 11, 1898, written by Sharon Robinson, who has given much time to the preparation of the article which appears there, and for this reason the portion of the address devoted to a particular description of the earliest settlers was omitted.

Fourteen of the founders came from this section, and later the families of Cobb, Cushman, Soule, Thompson, Sampson, Barrows, Bartlett, Tillson, Palmer, Doten, Churchill, Harden and others joined their neighbors in the new plantation. A few of them had found a half-way stopping place at New Gloucester, Yarmouth or Turner, but eventually made their homes in this town.

Meanwhile another stream of immigrants started from the home of the Proprietary in Dunstable and the surrounding towns.

A few years earlier, the Bucks, Allens and Spauldings had come from this region to make their homes in Buckstown, now Buckfield.

These were soon followed by a band from the same neighborhood who took up land in the new plantation north of Buckstown. Among these immigrants from Dunstable and vicinity were the Healds, Cummings, Bucks, Parlins, Fletchers, Barretts, Chandlers, Coburns, Abbotts, and others.

These latter chose their lands at the center or western part of this town, while those who came from the Old Colony settled in the eastern part along both sides of the division line.

Thus it will be seen that the lands in the central and eastern parts of the township were first taken up. It was not until ten or fifteen years later that settlers came into the western part, and improved the lands about the present Jackson Village.

The Proprietors sold many lots between 1786 and 1796. A road was laid out from Buckfield through the whole length of the township north and south, and so to New Pennacook (Rumford) before 1788.

By the opening of the year 1784, twenty one settlers had taken up land and made permanent improvements within the limits of the old plantation. Many of them had brought their families with them, and all of them spent the remainder of their lives here. We honor these as the true founders of this town, and here record their names:

Simeon Barrett, Charles Bisbee, Elisha Bisbee, Isaac Bonney, Noah Bosworth, John Briggs, Moses Buck, John Crockett, Oliver Cummings, Jr., Charles Ford, Joshua Ford, Benjamin Heald, John Keen, Meshac Keen, Daniel Oldham, Simeon Parlin, Increase Robinson, Joseph Robinson, Hezekiah Stetson, Isaac Sturtevant, William Tucker.

Of these founders three, viz: Benjamin Heald, Oliver Cummings and Increase Robinson, were also Proprietors. Each of these twenty one founders received a deed from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts of one hundred acres of land laid out so as to best include his improvements.

A plantation government was soon formed, assessors and collectors were elected, and plantation meetings were usually held at the dwelling house of Dea. Increase Robinson, or the barn of Hezekiah Stetson, or later in the school houses; here the early inhabitants discussed matters of common interest, cast their votes for State and plantation officers, taxed themselves to build school houses and establish schools.

In 1794 the plantation chose Dea. Increase Robinson to superintend a survey of the township and make a plan of the same to be sent to the office of the Secretary of State in Boston; with the help of Noah Bosworth, Jr. such a survey was made, a map drawn, which is still preserved at the State House in Boston. *

Among the first officers of the old plantation we find the names of John Briggs, Benjamin Heald, Enoch Hall, Timothy Cobb, Freeman Ellis, William Hayford, John Elwell, Seth Sturtevant and others.

Settlers fast poured in and bought the most available lots, and before the date of incorporation the number of inhabitants in the two plantations was about four hundred, of which nearly one half were within the present limits of the town of Sumner.

And what of the character of these early inhabitants?

'Tis said "the first settlers of a town are not only the physical parents of the future generations of that town, but give to their moral qualities a shape and character as distinctly marked as the complexion or personal habits which distinguish families from each other."

These early settlers of our town came of the hardy Puritan, Pilgrim Stock which has made the name of

New England famous throughout the world.

A variety of circumstances tended to cultivate in them habits of thought and self-restraint. Social equality and individual freedom prevailed everywhere among them; they had imbibed strong religious principles in their old Massachusetts homes, they possessed a sturdy independence, owning and tilling their own farms, and were servants to no man.

* * * *

“The sterile soil became productive under their sagacious culture, and the barren rock, astonished, found itself covered with luxuriant and unaccustomed verdure.”

These owners and founders and early settlers were filled with the spirit of patriotism.

On the nineteenth of April 1775, when Paul Revere set out on that famous ride to spread the alarm through every “Middlesex village and farm,” there started from one single Parish in Pembroke, ten Bonneys and a lesser number of Bisbees, Briggses, Coles, Hollises, Hayfords, Robinsons, Stetsons and Tillsons; while at the same time in this north-east corner of the old Commonwealth about the town of Dunstable, the Cummingses, Chandlers, Abbotts, Butterfields, Fletchers, Barretts, Healds and others, were getting out flint-locks and buckling on their swords.

No wonder, when less than a hundred years later there came another call to arms to defend the Union, that the decendants of these sturdy old Continental heroes were among the first to respond and give their lives in defence of that freedom which their ancestors had established. Sumner found no difficulty in filling her quota from her own sons,

"Whose faith and truth
On war's red touch-stone rang true metal,
Who ventured life and love and youth,
For the great prize of death in battle."

Such were the men that gave the stamp of their strong character to this town a hundred years ago.

"We could not, if we would, forget
Their matchless service or their worth;
No sun of hope shall ever set
While such remain to bless the earth."

Just ten years after the first comers, there were enough people in the plantation to warrant them in applying for a corporation. It then became a question, whether the two plantations should be incorporated separately or into two distinct towns. The original intention when the land was sold to the Proprietors, was that it should be eventually incorporated as two towns, as there was sufficient land to make two of the usual size of six miles square; but as a plantation, the two parts had acted together, and a few thought they ought to be united in one town. The majority, however, were decidedly in favor of two, and voted to act independently of each other.

In May 1793, a petition was signed by the inhabitants of West Butterfield, setting forth the great difficulties and disadvantages under which they were laboring, for lack of proper roads, schools and religious instruction, and asking for incorporation. This petition had seventeen signatures, representing the names Hall, Bisbee, Allen, Crockett, Bosworth, Ford, Fletcher, Parlin, Robinson, Keen, Buck and Tucker. *

In the following August, a similar action was taken in East Butterfield by a committee appointed by the town, headed by Dea. Increase Robinson. † These petitions were referred to the proper committee by the General Court, and were there killed; probably through the influence of the majority of the Proprietors, who naturally opposed the incorporation as increasing their taxes.

In December 1793, the West plantation chose a committee headed by John Briggs to prepare another petition, which they did, and asked to be incorporated under the name of New Hancock. ‡ (Hancock was then Governor of Massachusetts.) This petition received the same treatment as the preceding one.

It was not till December 1795, that the inhabitants of the East plantation drew up their second petition, which set forth in detail the facts concerning the purchase of the plantations and their division, and asked for incorporation by bounds as fixed by the Proprietors. || With this petition was sent a map showing the boundary line.

In the same month a third petition from the dwellers in the western part was sent to the General

Court, showing the want of civil regulations to improve the preached gospel and the seminaries of learning, and the lack of convenient roads "through our barren and uncultivated lands. And as your humble petitioners are willing to support a civil government, we pray your honors would not deny us the privilege of the same, and would incorporate us into a town by the name of Gilman." *

This petition was signed by twenty nine men, more than three-fourths of the voters at that time in the plantation; but action in the General Court was once more postponed.

Then a petition from the voters of both plantations was drawn up in December 1797, and this is the first petition which asks for incorporation with east branch of the twenty-mile river as the division line between the proposed new towns. The reasons for desiring a change in the division line are given in the petition, and were briefly these, that there were eight thousand acres more in the East plantation, and twenty more voters. This petition was drawn by Dea. Increase Robinson, who had built the mills at East Sumner about 1784, and desired that these mills, the only ones in the new settlement, should become a part of the West town.

This petition obtained forty eight signatures, some thirty five of them being those of inhabitants of West Butterfield, and the others those living just east of the old plantation division line. †

But the other inhabitants of the East plantation

did not silently submit to the loss of such a valuable part of their territory, and some of them thought the best solution was an incorporation of both plantations into one town. And a petition to this effect was immediately drawn up, explaining at length the objections to the river as a division line, and asking for incorporation as one town. This petition received thirteen signatures. * However, before the following spring the most of the objectors in the East town seem to have become reconciled to the proposed new line and sent in a petition declaring their approval of it. †

Meanwhile, the two plantations had each appointed a committee of six to make one final attempt for incorporation. The committee for the eastern part was composed of Dea. Increase Robinson, John Ellwell, Dr. Micah Allen, Isaac Bonney, William Hayford and James Irish; that from the western part of Isaac Sturtevant, Elisha Bisbee, Benjamin Heald, Joseph Robinson, John Briggs and Hezekiah Stetson.

This joint committee drew up a very strong petition explaining the difficulties which seemed to encounter them in their attempts to gain incorporation, and implying that the only opposition arose from the Proprietors who wished to avoid the payment of taxes. ‡

The plantation had met with so little success in sending petitions to the General Court in Boston, that they concluded to send an agent with this one to smooth the way for its acceptance, and the granting of their wishes in the matter. They chose Dea. Increase Robinson, and he went at the beginning of June 1798, carrying this petition signed by the joint committee.

By his efforts it avoided the fate of the half dozen preceding ones, and at last after five years' attempts, the two plantations were incorporated on Wednesday, June 13, 1798, by the names of Hartford and Sumner. * This town was the ninth town incorporated in the present limits of Oxford County, and had it been incorporated when the first petition was presented it would have been the fourth, only Fryeburg, Hebron and Paris preceding, but during the five years that the settlers were petitioning, Buckfield, Bethel, Waterford and Norway had been incorporated. Sumner was the one hundred and twenty-first town incorporated in the district of Maine.

The new town received its name from Increase Sumner, the Governor of Massachusetts at the time of incorporation. A copy of his picture graces our program today. He was born in Dorchester Mass. in 1746, and was graduated at Harvard College at the age of sixteen, was a member of the Massachusetts legislature at thirty, elected a congressman at thirty-five, appointed supreme judge at thirty-six, elected governor of the Commonwealth in 1797, and re-elected in 1798, again in 1799, when his election was almost unanimous. He died in office in June 1799, in the fifty third year of his age. His funeral was attended by the President of the United States, and was the most solemn and imposing that had ever been witnessed in Boston.

* * * *

Such was the man whose name this town bears, and she may well be proud of his record, as he certainly would be of his name-sake if he could be with us today.

The act of incorporation was the first act of the General Court at their June session 1798, and this day completes the full hundred years since that act went into effect and a new town was added to the great Commonwealth.

“A hundred years have passed away
Since first the forests' solitude,
Welcoming our fathers to its shade,
Offered an habitation rude.
A hundred years have passed away ;
And now upon their well earned ground,
With loyal hearts of joy and pride,
We hail the birthday of our town.

Strong hearts and willing hands were theirs
To wield the ax or till the soil,
And from the depths of forest shades
Grew fields of plenty for their toil ;
Brave souls and true have followed them,
Ready to serve their country's need,
A sterling stock throughout the years
Renowned by many a kindly deed.

One hundred years ! a glance around ;
We see the rugged wooded hills,
The village with its tapering spires.
The meadow by the limpid rills ;
All things seem beautiful and grand
Throughout the bright and joyous earth ;
Where can we find a lovelier spot
Than this blest land which gave us birth ?”

What would we not give now for a sketch of the life in the new town of Sumner at the opening of the present century, drawn by one who was a part of that life ! But we must be content with glimpses found in old letters, and handed down by tradition.

We find no great achievement as the world counts greatness, but a persistent holding up through poverty, trial, self-denial and opposition, that banner of righteousness, integrity and truth. It is such lives as these that build the great framework of a nation's honor.

But sometimes toil and labor put on the garb of pleasure and social enjoyment, when neighbors came together to raise each others buildings, or by the light of smoky lantern husked one another's corn, always on the lookout for red ears, or crowned the achievements of a new co-operative bed quilt by an evening of cheerful hilarity. Spelling matches and singing schools gave the young people an opportunity for forming acquaintances which often resulted in the formation of new households.

We catch a slight glimpse of the town in 1800, from the journal of Paul Coffin, who made a missionary tour through this section in that year. We quote the following:

"Sat., Sept. 6. Rode to Sumner through a good road and put up with Joseph Robinson, son of the Deacon, a pleasant family it was.

"Sept. 7, Sabbath. In Sumner. Preached to a large and serious assembly from Luke 16: 29, 30 and Romans 8: 16. Preached in the barn of Hezekiah Stetson. The audience was large and not very much divided, consisting of people not turned with the traveling doctrines of the day. Mr. Isaiah Cushman, lately from North Yarmouth, was greatly taught and relieved by the sermon on Romans 8: 16.

"This town is settled on a road running north and south six miles.

"Rode on my way to Hartford after supper and put up with Dea. Robinson. He has two houses, two barns, a saw and a grist mill, and a potash. He lives well and treated me with water mellons having white seeds."

The next day the Missionary went on to Hartford, but records no more "treating."

The ecclesiastical history was told yesterday, by the Rev. P. E. Miller, in his historical sermon, and need not be dwelt on farther.

One of the first things the settlers did long before incorporation was to provide for schools, voluntarily taxing themselves for their support, and we find in the early plantation warrants, articles for this purpose.

In 1795, the two plantations were divided into six school districts.

The first district included the north part of the town from the old Parlin place to the Benjamin Heald place on Sumner Hill.

The second district began at the Cobb place, just east of Sumner Hill, and took in the settlement about the mills at the east side of the plantation, and down toward Buckfield as far as Wm. Tucker's. The school house stood near the John Briggs place above Potash Hill.

The third district included the south part of the town from the Bonney place to the Buckfield line. *

Sumner has a military history of which she may well be proud. Of the twenty-one founders, sixteen were Revolutionary heroes whose services in the Continental army are recorded in the Archives of Massachusetts.

At the begining of this century a majority of the voters in this town were veterans of that great struggle. Not less than forty men who fought to establish independence have found a home in Sumner, and nearly the same number took part in the war of 1812, while more than a hundred of her sons went to the front in the struggle to maintain the Union, a record scarce paralleled any where. They proved themselves worthy sons of patriot sires. †

In the early days the mails were like angels' visits, few and far between. There was no post-office in town until 1812, when one was established on Sumner Hill at Simeon Barrett's, and he was Postmaster until 1840.

The early settlers got their mail from New Gloucester. The first post-rider in this part of the country was Jacob Howe, the ancestor of all the Howes yet living in town. He rode on horse back with his mail from Portland to Waterford once each week. Post-offices were established in Paris and Buckfield in 1801.

The second post-office in Sumner was established at East Sumner in 1832, with Dr. Bethuel Cary as postmaster, an office he continued to hold for twenty seven years.

The western part of the town got their mail from Paris for many years; this part of the town was not settled as soon as the East.

The first settlers here came about 1800, and in 1811, William Cobb bought the lot containing the mill privilege from the state of Massachusetts, it being the lot reserved by the State in 1787. He probably built the mills here about 1812, and afterwards sold them to Alphæus S. Drake who ran them for some years.

The third Post-office in town was established in 1833, here in West Sumner. Henry Howe was postmaster. He was succeeded in 1837 by Whitney Cummings, who held the office until 1855.

The town had a steady growth for the first fifty years of its coporate life.

In 1790 there were one hundred and eighty-nine persons in both plantations. The population increased rapidly, and in 1820, at the time of the separation from Massachusetts, there were one thousand inhabitants in Sumner alone. These increased to nearly thirteen hundred in 1840, but the census in 1850, showed a decrease which has progressed steadily until in the census of 1890 Sumner was credited with nine hundred inhabitants.

The causes of this decrease are not far to seek. Between 1840 and 1860 the great west was opened, and young men emigrated to those fertile prairie lands. In 1849, gold was discovered in California, and drew still others from the town.

From 1860 to 1870, the civil war decimated the ranks of the younger men, and the population fell nearly fifty between 1870 and 1880. In the next ten years the town lost only fifteen. To-day the tide has turned, and Sumner probably has a greater population than ten years ago.

I purposely refrain from mentioning the events of the last half century. These will be rehearsed here this afternoon by those who have been actors in them. We have with us today those whose lives and memories cover almost the full century of Sumner's history.

It has been my task to recall the memories of still more ancient times; of the founders and the fore fathers. But the history of a century cannot be crowded into an hour, and time forbids us to dwell longer on this theme.

It is not necessary to claim that our ancestors on this soil were in all things perfect or altogether faultless men in order to point to them as in many ways our benefactors.

Their toils and struggles, their sacrifices and prayers, their counsels, faith and patience, have all entered into the long process through which this town has become what it is; and have had their results in the material, the moral, the intellectual, and the spiritual well being which we recognize as our heritage today.

"The good men do lives after them; the ill is oft interred with their bones."

Then all honor to these men.

But what of the coming century?

At the celebration of the Bi-centennial of this town in 1998, what will be said of us?

Shall it be said of us that we maintained the integrity, fidelity and honesty which was our inheritance from our fathers?

Amid all this rejoicing and jubilee let us not forget their examples, and strive to emulate their virtues.

"God of our days! Thy guiding power
Sustained the lonely pioneer
Who first beneath the forest's shade
His evening hearth fire kindled here;
To Thee a welcome sacrifice;
It's smoke ascending to the skies.

"God of the centuries! today
A hundred years their tale have told,
And lingering in their solemn shade
We listen to the days of old.
To us how vast the century's flight!
To Thee as watches in the night.

"God of eternity! Thy hand
To nobler hills has beckoned on
The fathers, who, by many toils
For us this pleasant dwelling won;
With them hereafter may we raise
Celestial anthems to Thy praise."

*

"God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath Whose awful Hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine,
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget !

"The tumult and the shouting dies,
The captains and the kings depart;
Still stands Thine ancient Sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart,
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!"

GENTENNIAL POEM.

(Written by Mrs. HELEN S. ROBERTSON.)

Hail Sumner! proudly we hail thee to-day.
Thou hast reached a milestone on thy way,
And for once from care and toil we are free;
We consecrate this day to God and thee.
Then hail! we'll make the welkin ring with cheers,
In honor and praise of thy crowning years,
From Mt. Benson's summit bold and grand,
Throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Hail Sumner! gladly we hail thee again,
In honor of the brave women and men
Who the perils of the wilderness dared,
And many privations and hardships shared,
That to posterity they might hand down
Freedom and homes in this delightful town.
These pioneers lived lives good and true,
Their tastes were simple and their wants were few.

They built their cabins by the wild beast's lair,
Their paths were crossed by the wolf and bear;
The stealthy panther in the forest stayed;
The Indian in feathers and blanket arrayed,
Reared his bark wigwam on the mountain side,
No roads, only spotted trees for a guide;
Brave and undaunted, many dangers they faced;
Their names on the honor roll should be placed.

Time pauses not, it has forged ahead
Until one hundred years have sped.
A century has wrought a wonderous change—
We can scarcely believe it, 'tis so strange.

Now neat farmhouses dot hillside and plain,
With fruitful orchards and fields of grain ;
Here and there church spires dot in the sun,
And schoolhouses open to every one.

Then, fondly loved Sumner, we hail !
Thou'rt lovely. When mists thy mountain veil,
And every lake within its rocky bed
Mirrors trees and flowers, while overhead
The azure sky with clouds of faintest gray,
Just touched with pink, at the dawn of day,
Surmounts a scene of such rare loveliness
That words can but imperfectly express.

Hail Sumner ! loudly we hail thee and well,
In memory of our heroes who fell
Defending their country—fighting for the right.
Forget not heroes that are yet in sight,
They have been ready in their country's cause.
Sumner's men have done duty in all wars—
Stood by their colors as if't mattered not
When surrounded by flying shell and shot.

We stand to-day on the selfsame sod
Which was by our forefathers trod.
What a boon to us they did bequeathe !
There's freedom in the air we breathe—
We pledge ourselves this boon to keep.
Great Keeper, who doth not slumber nor sleep,
With thy help our town shall be free
For many and many a century.

GENTENNIAL HYMN.

(Written by ALICE E. MAXIM.)

O God above ! to Thee we raise
Our praiseful song this day of days !
Our fathers loved and worshiped here ;
O grant this day their presence near.

Give us the power to feel that they
Unite with us to sing and pray,
And something yet of interest see
In our dear town's prosperity.

Our ancestors were led by Thee
To make their home this fair country ;
And Thou their toilsome lives did bless
With flowers of mercy numberless.

These lands of forest growth were shorn
To yield rich fruits and golden corn ;
And many pleasant homes were reared,
Which their descendants hold endeared.

These rocky hills and pleasant vales,
These lakes where youthful pleasure sails,
Are dear to all our hearts to-day,
As to our grandsires passed away.

The roses by the road-side grow,
Our grand-dames planted long ago ;
And bloom as sweet this dewy morn
As if in Eden newly born.

The choicest fruitage of the years,
Attained by struggles, prayers and tears,
Is not of gold, but faith in Thee,
Great love and sweetest charity.

And in the future, as the past,
May Thy strong arms, around us cast,
Make all our labors go to prove
That in Thy love we live and move.

PRENTISS CUMMINGS.

OLIVER CUMMINGS AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

BY PRENTISS CUMMINGS.

Oliver Cummings was born in Dunstable, Mass., July 12, 1756, and died in Sumner, July 2, 1823. He was son of Capt. Oliver Cummings, and was himself a soldier in the war of the Revolution. The family was Scotch, and the name was spelled Comings, Cumings, Comins, Cumins, and in other ways; and the early settlers pronounced the name as if it had no "g". It was at my father's suggestion that the present spelling was adopted by the family generally. The original emigrant is said to have been Isaac Cummings, who settled in Topsfield, Mass., in 1632. The family was reputable, and very religious; and among them were a number of brave soldiers.

When a child I heard it talked in the family that my grandfather, being one of the original proprietors, came early to Sumner to locate his land and settle, as he was engaged to be married to Betsy Bailey, a girl brought up in his father's family. He brought with him a plan of the grant which had on it the two ponds now known as Pleasant and Labrador. His land was located in fact about a mile southwesterly of Labrador Pond, where he afterwards lived and built a house which is still standing; but he mistook what is now called Moose Pond in Paris for the westerly one on his map, and therefore began his clearing near Pleasant Pond on or near what was later the Charles Buck place. After he had got started he climbed the hill near by, and seeing another pond in the east, became apprehensive he had made a mistake. He spent several days investigating; but there were no settlers within many miles, and he had no means of satisfying his doubts. He therefore returned to Dunstable; and did not come back until he had married and had one or two children. He thus missed being the earliest settler in the town.

While he was making his clearing in the center of the town and building a cabin, his wife and children boarded in a house which is now the ell of the Col. White place in Buckfield. He passed Sundays with his family, and kept run of the days by cutting notches in a stick. Once he forgot to do so and worked all day Sunday; and his conscience was much troubled that he had allowed his private interests to make him careless enough to violate a duty.

I know little of my grandfather beyond the fact that he was a prosperous farmer, and fond of music. At the age of sixteen he was a drummer-boy in his father's company; and when he became a man sang tenor, and played the bass-viol. I think he played in parson Sewall's church. My grandmother had one of those high soprano voices known as counter; and when the children were young enough to sing alto, he, by means of his bass-viol, made up a family quartet.

By his first wife, Betsy Bailey, he had two children, Sibyl and Oliver.

SIBYL, married Zadoc Bosworth of Sumner, and left five children. Several of her descendants are still living.

OLIVER, died many years ago in New York city. He married Polly Churchill, (a sister of his father's second wife), and had seven children, three of whom, Lawrence P., Harriet, and Mehitable, lived to marry. Of these Lawrence P. was a piano manufacturer in New York city, and when he had accumulated a competency he became a presbyterian minister, and was a man of high character and great thoughtfulness. He married Rebeckah Doremus, and had three daughters. His widow is now living in New York with her unmarried daughters, Henrietta and Sarah. The third daughter, Harriet, is wife of Dr. Chamberlain, has children, and lives in Springfield, Mass.

Harriet, (twin sister of Lawrence P.), married Aretas Damon of Sumner, has no children, and is now a widow living in Buckfield.

Mehitable, married Merritt F. Damon of Sumner, is living, and has several children.

For his second wife my grandfather married, Feb. 1, 1804, Phoebe Churchill, daughter of Andrew Churchill of Sumner, who with five of his sons were Revolutionary soldiers. She in her latter years lived with my father, and was well known in the community as "Aunt Phœbe". She died at an advanced age. By her husband she had three children, Betsy Bailey, Larnard, and Whitney.

BETSY BAILEY, born Dec. 3, 1804, and died at the age of twelve.

LARNARD, born Aug. 13, 1806, and died in Sumner in 1884. He was a farmer, miller, and Free-will Baptist preacher, was very eccentric, and noted for droll, original, and unexpected sayings. His attachment to his brother Whitney, and indeed to all his relatives was very strong. He married Nancy White, who is still living in Sumner at a very advanced age. They had three children who lived to grow up, as follows:—

Julia Ann, married Caleb Thomas of Hartford, and died leaving a large family of children. Mr. Thomas is still living.

Marilla, lived with her mother and died unmarried. She was a noble, self-sacrificing woman.

James Larnard, married Clara Washburn of Sumner, and has two daughters.

WHITNEY, (Oliver's second son by Phoebe Church-ill), was born Dec. 18, 1808, and died in Buckfield, March 4, 1881. He was a farmer, beginning on his father's place, later at West Sumner, and afterwards at Buckfield. At various dates he also owned and run all the different mills at West Sumner. He was for many years deacon of the Baptist church, and held various town and other offices. He married Mary Hart Prentiss, daughter of Henry Prentiss of North Paris. She was a school-teacher of local note, was a great reader of good books, with a great memory, and an acceptable writer both of prose and verse for several newspapers. She took much interest in young people, to whom she had the gift of imparting something of her own inspiration and ambition. Both she and her husband are buried in the cemetery at North Paris. They had three children, Isabella, Prentiss, and Mellen, the last of whom died in childhood.

Isabella, was born in the old Oliver Cummings house April 15, 1834, and married Joseph S. Ingraham, an apothecary in Bangor, Maine, son of Rev. John S. Ingraham of Augusta. She is a widow, and has a summer place on Paris Hill. She has two children, the elder of whom; Paulina, is unmarried and lives with her mother. The second daughter Mary, is wife of Albert E. Davies, and lives in Brooklyn, New York.

Prentiss, was born in West Sumner, Sept. 10, 1840. Owing to a theory of his mother that every man should have a trade, he worked three years between the ages of fourteen and seventeen at printing in the Oxford Democrat office. He then began fitting for college under Free-land Howe and at Hebron Academy, and later took a two-years course at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H. He graduated from Harvard College in 1864. The following year he acted as principal of the Portland High School, and began the study of law in the office of Nathan Webb, now U. S. District Judge for Maine. In the fall of 1865 he entered Harvard Law School. While there, owing to some sudden changes among college professors, he was unexpectedly appointed Tutor in Latin, and had charge of the Sophomore Class in that department until the winter of 1870, when he entered a law office in Boston, having previously graduated at the Harvard Law School. In the summer of 1870 he was admitted to the Boston bar, and commenced practice. In 1874 he was appointed chief assistant to the U. S. Attorney in Boston, and until 1880 had almost exclusive charge of the law business of the government in that important district. In the years 1881, 1882, 1883, he represented the great business ward of the city in the Common Council, and in 1884 and 1885 in the Legislature. In 1885 he was elected president of the Cambridge Railroad, and held that office until 1887 when the company was consolidated with the other Boston Street-railways as the West End company. He then became Vice-president of the new company, and so continued until in 1897 it was leased to the Boston Elevated Railway; and since has been advisory counsel of the last named corporation. His corporate duties have always been chiefly legal. His home is in Brookline, where he is Trustee of the public library and of the local savings bank, is a member of the school committee, and has held other offices. He is also member of many clubs and societies, has been president of many of them, and has given papers and lectures on scientific and literary subjects. He has made a specialty of Homer and Homeric literature for recreation, and also of chess, and was for many years president of the Boston Chess Club. Of the various offices and business positions he has held he never sought one directly or indirectly. It is perhaps worth noticing that all his male ancestors on his mother's side as well as his father's whose age made it possible took an active part in the Revolution; and one of them, Dr. John Hart, he succeeds in the Society of the Cincinnati. On Feb'y 25, 1880, he married Annie D. Snow of Cambridge. He has no children.

It thus appears probable that in the next generation the original settler will have no descendant bearing the name of Cummings. Many of the earliest and most important dates above given were recorded in the family bible by my mother; and are inserted here for preservation against the next centennial.

CAPT. GILBERT M. SMALL.

Capt. Gilbert M. Small, who at the present time resides in Jackson Village, is great-grandson of John Small, who removed from Cape Elizabeth to what is now Milbridge, in 1762; grandson of Dea. Elisha Small, who was one of the early settlers of Cherryfield; and son of Benjamin Small, who married Serena Wakefield, and also resided in Cherryfield. At the age of eighteen years, he hired on a sailing vessel "to go before the mast," and continued in that capacity, with a salary of from eight to sixteen dollars per month until he had saved money enough to pay his way at an Academy in Gorham, at which place he took a course in navigation. After completing his studies he returned again to his sea-faring life, and was soon promoted to the position of captain. He served as captain of merchant vessels doing business in foreign countries, up to the time of the civil war, and seeing his country's need of officers in the navy, he enlisted as "acting master," and served one year, part of that time on the ship "Ohio." At the close of the war he returned to his home, and having contracted disabilities which made him physically unable to follow his chosen vocation, that of following the sea, he commenced the study of medicine. He continued the practice of medicine for a term of ten years, at which time his old longing for the sea came back to him, and he again served as captain of merchant trading vessels until 1880, when he retired from the sea and removed to Sumner. In 1847 he married Eleanor G. Moore, and had three children, Helen S., who is wife of Capt. J. A. Robertson, resident of Harrington; Byron M., an attorney at law and clerk of courts for Franklin County, who resides in Farmington; and Daniel D., a successful farmer of Sumner.

HENRY H. MAXIM.

Volunteers, and served three and one-half years, and is spoken of by his officers and comrades as having been a good soldier. The writer recently read in the "Oxford Democrat," issue of April 12, 1898, an interesting account of an exciting and hazardous experience of his in rescuing two wounded comrades from the battle-field during the first day's battle at Port Hudson. The account was written by himself, and its truth is vouched for by responsible testimony. The writer of this sketch has seen the letter containing the sworn statement of the party he rescued, in which they acknowledge in most glowing terms the daring and bravery he displayed in saving their lives at the risk of his own. He was married July 4, 1865, to Alice E. Ripley, daughter of Col. Orison and Hannah Ripley of Paris. They have one child, Henry B., who was born July 17, 1868.

DEA. INCREASE ROBINSON AND DESCENDANTS.

Dea. Increase Robinson, the progenitor of the Robinsons that have since lived in Sumner, was born in 1739, and his wife, Rebecca Bourne, in 1733.

They moved into town from Pembroke, Mass., in 1783, being the sixth family to settle in the east part of the town. They brought with them eight children, four boys and four girls. The names of the children, by order of their birth, were as follows:

Joseph, Priscilla, Asa, Elizabeth, Alvin, Myrtilla, Susan and Increase. With the exception of Priscilla, who married John Keen, and settled at North Turner, and Myrtilla, who remained single, the children all lived and reared families in Sumner.

JOSEPH, the eldest, married Patty Spaulding of Buckfield, and had nine children, Rebecca, Joseph, Jr., Lydia, Loami, Stephen, Patty, Leonard, Susan and Spaulding.

PRISCILLA, who married John Keen, had eight children, Anna, Priscilla, John, Jr., Jacob, Josiah, Jerusha, Rebecca and Thomas.

ASA married Deborah Briggs and Margaret Bartlett, and reared a family of nineteen children, Asa, Salome, Margaret, Deborah, Lucy, Orrin, Sumner, Sabrina, Sophronia, Livona, Ervin, Susan, Wealthy, John, Daniel, A. Judson, Lucius, and George Dana.

ELIZABETH married Simon Parlin, and had ten children, Merinda, Ira, Almond, Oliver, Harvey, Robinson, Simon, Jr., Elizabeth, Wealthy and Vincent Cooledge.

ALVIN married Lydia Soule, and had seven children, Alvin, Jr., Abigail, William, John, Increase, Zebulon and Isaac.

MYRTILLA did not marry, as before stated.

SUSAN married Judah Keen, and had nine children, Cyrus, Judah, Jr., John, Joanna, Myrtilla, Elvira, Juliette, Asher and Lydia.

INCREASE, JR., married Abigail Parlin, and had six children, Zury, Anna, Almeda, Sharon, Rebecca and David Brainard.

Nearly all of them reared large families, that in time married and multiplied, until the names of Robinson, Keen, and Parlin, were as familiar as household words.

DEA. INCREASE ROBINSON was, in his early days in the new settlement, a useful citizen, as he erected the first saw, shingle and grist-mills, and opened the first place for the sale of groceries. He also was a cooper, and made many useful wooden utensils for pioneers' use. The first public religious meetings were held in his house. The house that he built was the first framed house in town, and is still in good condition, and occupied by some of the fourth generation. His son, Increase, Jr., succeeded him in the mills, and he in turn was succeeded by his son, Dea. Sharon Robinson, who operated the mills many years, and lived and died at the old homestead.

"Dea. Sharon," as he was familiarly called, was also a useful and respected citizen, a devoted christian man, a hard-working and honest person, with a character above reproach. His son, Sharon, Jr., at date of this sketch, still lives upon the old farm, and was the author of the three-page account of the "Sumner Centennial," published in the "Lewiston Evening Journal," June 11, 1898.

Tradition says that the numerous families bearing the name of Robinson in New England, sprang from one of two brothers that came over from England, and one of whom settled in New Jersey, and the other in Massachusetts. As will be seen in the foregoing paragraph of this sketch, Dea. Increase Robinson came from Massachusetts. History and observation show that the Robinson race were hardy, industrious, temperate and useful in their day and generation.

Charles Edward Handy, Jr., the publisher of this little volume, who for the past twelve years has been a resident of Sumner, was born in Andover, Me., Feb. 4, 1865. His father, Charles E. Handy, who served as Coporal in the civil war nearly four years, and at present is a carpenter and contractor

HANNIBAL H. McALISTER.

The McAlisters were a clan in the south of Scotland. Trouble arose among them which caused them to divide, part of them emigrating to Ireland and the others to America. Those who came to this country finally settled in what is now Lovell, and the descendants of those sturdy old Scotchmen are now scattered from Maine to the Pacific coast.

The writer, in making research, has discovered several ways in which the name is spelled. One of the old Scotch ways of spelling the name was "MacAlister," and other ways found to-day are "McCollister," "McAllister" and "McAlister," the last named being the most proper.

HANNIBAL H. McALISTER, the subject of this sketch, was born in Paris, Sept. 4, 1838, and died in Sumner, Mar. 19, 1897. He was son of Samuel and Lydia McAlister, who lived on the "Bisco farm" in Paris. His mother died when he was young, leaving eight children, and the younger ones were put out in different families, he going in to the family of Dea. Soloman Doble, who lived on the farm where Mrs. Julia Thorne, widow of the late Barnet Thorne, now resides. He was connected with the Masonic fraternity, being raised to the Sublime degree of a Master Mason, Oct. 25, 1882, in Granite Lodge, No. 182, of West Paris. As his father before him figured very prominently in the above named order, it would, perhaps, be of interest to quote from "History of Granite Lodge," one little scrap of romance, founded on facts, in which Samuel McAlister figured as hero. Oxford Lodge furnishes the ground-work and the development is left to Granite Lodge. Samuel McAlister applied to Oxford Lodge May 26, 1825, was accepted and initiated Aug. 25, crafted Oct. 20, and raised Dec. 22d, same year. He served as Tyler from Sept. 18, 1828, to Sept. 30, 1830; was present Mar. 24, 1831, that being the last meeting of Oxford Lodge until 1853. After the stated communication, Dec. 22, 1825, when he took his third degree, the eclipse came, known as the "Morgan Scandal," a twin sister to "Salem Witchcraft," which for the time cast a shade over the light of Masonry.

In the meantime, he took to himself a wife, raised a family of children, and removed to Massachusetts. On Aug. 28, 1882, he visited his native lodge, found himself a stranger in his own home, among scores of his brethren, none of whom could avouch for him; but by a complete record, his identity was soon proved.

On the 25th of October following, he visited Granite Lodge, and for the first time witnessed work in the Third degree, his only living son, Hannibal H., being raised to the Sublime degree of a Master Mason.

Father and son have laid down their armor and are at rest, but their memory still lives on perpetual record.

Hannibal H. McAlister married Isabel C. Chadbourne, born Feb. 1, 1842, daughter of John R. and Rhoda C. Chadbourne of Sumner. They had four children, as follows:

Francis A., born Feb. 2, 1867, married, Nov. 23, 1891, Gertrude Louisa Buck, born May 16, 1866, daughter of Henry Clinton Buck of Sumner, and settled on a farm in Sumner. They have two children, Edith Belle, born Nov. 14, 1892; and Gracie Clintie, born Oct. 4, 1894.

Mary Emma, born Feb. 2, 1869, and died in infancy.

Mary Emma, named after the above, was born Feb. 27, 1871, married Charles E. Handy, and has three children, Francis Carlyle, Archie Revere and Florence Alma, (see page 84).

Cora A., born Aug. 28, 1873, married Perley A. Crawford of Paris, and has one child, John Hamlin.

H. H McAlister had three brothers and four sisters, namely:

Emeline, born Mar. 31, 1823, married Charles Gowell, and died Mar. 14, 1854. (See page 75).

Lydia married a Mr. Olmstead, and had three children. Lewis, a carpenter and contractor, resides in Falmouth, is married and has children; Alma, who married a Vining, settled in San Francisco, and had one child, Susie; Emma, who married a Clark, also resides in San Francisco.

Arabel married Albert Bisbee, and had three children, Albert, Cora and Ida. She died in Minneapolis, where they lived many years.

Nancy R., born May 19, 1829, and died Mar. 26, 1854, was the first wife of J. J. Abbott of Sumner, and had one child, Ella R. (deceased), born Sept. 9, 1851.

Francis served in the Civil war and died unmarried. Eldridge went West and died unmarried.

Augustus, born April 1, 1837. He enlisted, in Aug., 1861, in Co. G., 16th Mass. Reg., and died in hospital in Washington, Mar. 2, 1863. He married Mary Young, and had three children, Edward Warren, born Oct. 8, 1856; Howard, born Mar. 30, 1859, and drowned at sea Apr. 17, 1896; and A. Waldo, born Mar. 29, 1862, and died Dec. 2, 1862.

HIRAM B. CHANDLER AND DESCENDANTS.

Personal sketches of our respected and honored citizens would be very incomplete without reference to "Uncle" Hiram Chandler, who faithfully served as postmaster at West Sumner for over forty years with only one interruption of only a few months in Pierce's administration. He also served for over twenty-five years consecutively as town treasurer, and it is no disparagement to any one to say that the town never had a more honest servant. He was in trade for many years and his son, G. A. Chandler, succeeds him in the business. Honesty, integrity, and upright dealing with all characterized his useful and honored life. Uncle Hiram's word was as good as his bond, and his life one of usefulness.

HIRAM B. CHANDLER, son of Reuben and Abigail (Barrows) Chandler, who were among the early settlers of Paris, Oxford County, and Minot, a few miles distant, but passed the latter part of their life in Sumner, where he died at the age of fifty-six years, was born in Minot, Androscoggin County, Feb. 13, 1814. He built his shops in Sumner, and followed the trades of a cooper and wheel-wright until about 1846, at which time he engaged in mercantile pursuits, establishing and conducting, for many years, or till his death, the business in West Sumner, which has since been carried on by two of his sons. He was, for many years, an active member of the Universalist church. On Nov. 19, 1838 he married Emeline O. Coburn, daughter of Samuel Coburn, born Nov. 10, 1819, and died January 26, 1899. They had eight children. Of these,

MARY E., the eldest, born Dec. 16, 1839, married Kingman Gurney, and died Aug. 6, 1862, leaving one daughter, Flora L., who was born May 21, 1860, and is now wife of Elbridge Tuell, and has two children, Mary E. and Emily.

JULIA A., the second child, was born June 1, 1841, married Horace Gurney, and died Nov. 22, 1864.

VICTORIA A., the third child, was born Feb. 7, 1843, married William T. Bonney, and has the following children: Corry A., who was born Sept. 23, 1864, married Anna Heald of North Buckfield, and had one child, Lizzie. After the death of his first wife he married Effie Abbott, daughter of Wm. G. Abbott of Sumner, and has three children, Elva E., Walter and Owen Hubert; Agnes E., born May 23, 1871; and William A., born Sept. 15, 1878.

ELIZA G., the fourth child, married George E. Forbes, and died without issue, May 26, 1870.

OSCAR G., the eldest son, a resident of Sumner, who was born July 2, 1848. By his first wife, Ella Whitman, he had one child, Elton, who was born Nov. 1, 1874; and by his second wife, Abbie Farrar, a son, Leslie, born Feb. 2, 1879.

AGNES E., the sixth child, was born Jan. 17, 1851, married the Rev. George E. Forbes, and died May 12, 1885, leaving one child, Murray E.

GEORGE A., the seventh child, was born Feb. 21, 1858. He acquired his education in the common and high schools. After completing his studies he taught nine terms of school, after which he engaged in the mercantile business, which, since the death of his father, he has managed as an active partner, with Harold, his younger brother. He is now carrying a large and varied line of general merchandise, embracing unnumbered articles for domestic, agricultural, and mechanical use; and they not only have the most profitable trade in the village, but supply a numerous patronage from the adjacent towns. He served as town clerk for ten consecutive years, postmaster for eight years, besides holding other town offices, and has served efficiently for three years as a member of the school board, being deeply interested and well versed in educational matters. He is connected with the West Paris, No. 15, Lodge of Odd Fellows, and the Onward Rebekah Lodge, I. O. O. F., and is an active member of the Universalist church. Oct. 12, 1879, he married Helen Tuell, daughter of Benjamin V. Tuell of Sumner. They had two children, Linnie T., who was born Sept. 2, 1880, and died Apr. 5, 1898. She was an estimable young lady, smart, capable, and much liked by all, assisted her father in the post-office and store, and was, just prior to her death, attending Hebron Academy, with a view to graduate from that institution. H. Benjamin T., their second child, born Dec. 8, 1884, is still attending school and, being capable of his age, assists his father about the post-office and store.

HAROLD, the youngest child of Hiram, was born Mar. 1, 1868. After finishing his studies he entered his father's store as clerk; and, at the death of his father he, together with his brother, George A., succeeded to its possession, and carried on the business under the firm name of "G. A. Chandler & Co.," until his death, which occurred Oct. 7, 1898. He possessed mechanical genius of a high order; and, having acquired a knowledge of printing without the aid of instruction, when he had become proficient in the business, and desired to apply steam-power to his presses,

GEORGE R. DRAKE,
Son of William H. and Desier B. Drake, born in Sumner, January 13, 1829.

he built an engine, which performed the required service in the office. He carried on quite an extensive business as a job printer, doing a great deal of work for the town, besides filling numerous orders for private individuals and business concerns; and the little enterprise proved very profitable to him. He was an honest, upright, and capable young man, much liked by all, and at his death the town lost a good and useful citizen.

THE GOLBY FAMILY.

William H. Colby was born in Gardiner, Me. in 1841. He joined the Union army in 1862, enlisting with the Rock Island Volunteers, and served in the navy on the "Ohio." In the fall of 1874, he came to Sumner, where he conducted a blacksmith shop until his death, which occurred Oct. 22, 1887. He married Addie L. Barrett, daughter of Reuben and Joan Barrett of Andover, and had two children,

Fred Bennett, who was born in Andover, May 30, 1869. At the age of five he came to Sumner with his parents, and lived there till the age of eighteen, taking advantage of the best school facilities which were offered. In the fall of 1887 he went to Auburn to attend the Edward Little High School. During the winter of this same year he taught school in the Farrar's Mills district, and then resumed studies at the high school, where he remained two years, at the end of which time he entered Hebron Academy to finish his academic course. Taught school both winters while at Hebron, during the holiday vacation. Graduated in June, 1891, having the honor of Class Historian. The two years at Hebron were busy and profitable. Like many other students there at the time he had to work his own way and found it no easy matter. In the fall of 1891 he entered Bowdoin College to pursue special studies in the sciences, and particularly to lay a foundation for the study of medicine. After pursuing this course for two years he entered the Medical department, where he remained two years, and then entered Dartmouth Medical College to finish his studies. By taking this step, although it was much harder, he was able to graduate six months earlier than if he had remained at Bowdoin. Received his degree in Medicine from Dartmouth, Nov. 26, 1895. The week after graduation he accepted a position in a large hospital in Bridgewater, Mass., where he remained nearly a year, when he was appointed to a position on the Medical Staff at the Boston Insane Hospital; which position he has held since Nov., 1896.

Ethel S., was born in Andover, Oct. 6, 1870, and came to Sumner in 1874. She married Henry R. Porter of Andover, who is well known in that vicinity as an extensive lumber contractor and Rangely Lake guide. They have three daughters.

THE BISBEE FAMILY.

—BY—

CAPT. LEVI BRADFORD BISBEE.

Charles Bisbee, the seventh pioneer of Sumner, was a direct descendant of, and the fifth generation from Thomas Besbidge (which was the original spelling of the name), who sailed from Sandwich, England, in the ship Hercules, and landed at Scituate harbor in the spring of 1634.

District Attorney for the District of Florida, and has served two full terms in Congress, from the Jacksonville District. He now has a very extensive and lucrative practice, having a wide field in both the State and United States Courts, and stands at the head of his profession in Florida. Col. Bisbee has always found time to take an active interest in political matters, both State and National, his services having been sought as a stump speaker, not only in Florida and other Southern States, but also in his native state of Maine.

Mary Bisbee,² the third child of Charles, the pioneer, m. Charles Ford of Pembroke, Mass., and removed to Sumner. Her second son, Charles, Jr., was the first white child born in town.

John,² the fifth child of Charles, the pioneer, settled on a farm about one-half mile south from Labrador Pond. He was a noted bear trapper. He raised a large family, most of whom settled in other towns. His daughter, Dolly, m. Thaddeus Thompson, and lived for many years on the "Uncle Johny" Bisbee homestead.

Solomon,² the sixth son of Charles, the pioneer, settled on a farm opposite the "Uncle Johny" place. He was also a blacksmith. He bought the farm of Moses, his brother, Oct. 28, 1791. At that time very little clearing had been done, and to Solomon belongs the credit of reclaiming it from the wilderness. He m. Ruth, daughter of Simeon Barrett, and sister of Simeon, Jr., May 10, 1795. Of their ten children only three settled in town. Abel W., their second child, was an expert blacksmith and, after living for a time in Paris, bought the Oliver Cummings farm, which is now owned by his son Antipass. He was postmaster at Sumner, twenty-two years; often held town office, and was a member of the Legislature in 1850. First, he m. Polly Record, and had George; second, m. Nancy Durell, and had Polly, Nancy and Antipass.

Anna,³ the sixth child of Solomon, m. Abel Fletcher who, at the age of ninety-three, is the oldest person now living in town. Aunt Annie, as she was familiarly known, was beloved by all. Their children were, Harriett A., m. Luther Hollis; Rachel R., m. Addison Parlin; and Abel Thomas, who was accidentally shot.

Solomon, Jr.,³ the seventh, familiarly known as "Dea. Bisbee," lived for a few years in Waterford, but at the death of his father came to Sumner and cared for his mother, on the old homestead, where he lived and died. He was postmaster several, and treasurer of the minister fund for the town many years. He m. Hannah P., daughter of Benjamin Heald, Jr. Of their children, Timothy H. went to California at the age of twenty, and now resides in Oregon, where he has a family; Maria m. Orrin P. Houghton, and resides in Kansas; Lewis H. lives on the old homestead, and has a family of four children. He has been a member of the board of selectmen.

Calvin,² the seventh son of Charles, the pioneer, lived and died on his father's homestead. He was a member of the convention which framed the State Constitution, often held town office, and served as member of the Legislature. Of his children, Lewis, known as Captain, only remained in town, and still lives with his aged wife on the old homestead. They had two daughters, and have made a home for nineteen orphan children and five old people. The Captain has been a member of the board of selectmen, several years.

George W. Bisbee, * son of Elbridge G., settled in Hartford, where he carried on the blacksmith business. He removed to Peru, in 1857, where he died Jan. 27, 1872. His wife, Mary B., died in Buckfield, June 25, 1885.

* An addition to last paragraph, page 112.

CAPT. LEWIS BISBEE, son of Calvin, and grandson of Charles, was born in Sumner, at the old Bisbee homestead, August 10, 1808, and at the date of this sketch (March 4, 1899,) is still living upon the old farm of his father and grandfather. He was married Dec. 31, 1829, to Elizabeth Sampson of Hartford, by Dr. Bethuel Cary. The children of this worthy couple were:

Amanda M., born July 11, 1830, and married, June 7, 1850, Fred A. Spaulding of Buckfield, who died June 12, 1856, after which she married Rufus K. Harlow, and since the latter's death has remained single and kindly cared for her aged parents.

Amerilla, born June 13, 1832, married, Oct. 26, 1852, William F. Bard of Hartford, and died May 29, 1853.

On December 31, 1879, about 125 of the friends and relatives of Capt. Bisbee and wife assembled at his residence and celebrated in an interesting manner their fiftieth wedding anniversary. June 9, 1874, there was a pleasant reunion of the Bisbee family at the old homestead, a result of which was the publishing of some of the family records from which we gathered dates used in this sketch.

Calvin Bisbee, father of Capt. Lewis, was a prominent citizen in town for many years, and one of its municipal officers for a long time, as the records will attest. He was also a member of the convention which framed the Constitution of the State, and subsequently served as a member of the Legislature.

ELIZABETH (SAMPSON) BISBEE.

CAPT. LEWIS BISBEE.

Capt. Lewis Bisbee has been similarly honored, as he has served faithfully and long as one of Sumner's town officers, and in 1854 was chosen to represent the district in the State Legislature, being a successful opponent to the Hon. F. O. J. Smith of the Buckfield Branch R. R., notoriety. The Captain sometimes speaks of his triumphant election over such a candidate, as one of the proudest events of his life.

During the late Civil War, the Captain was very loyal and of valuable assistance in filling quotas and raising money for defraying town expenses, sometimes giving his own note to satisfy the timid and doubtful.

In the early agitation of the Washingtonian temperance movement Capt. Bisbee signed the pledge, and has faithfully kept the same inviolate to the present time. At the town of Sumner's Centennial Celebration he, with his faithful wife, was present and responded to a sentiment proposed for "Our aged citizens." To him, more than any other man, is the author of this brief sketch indebted for the early history and personal incidents which have been collected and made a record in the columns of the Lewiston Journal of June 16, 1898, a part of which is published in this little volume.

His faithful wife and congenial companion, at the age of 91, is still a cheerful helpmate and comfort to him in declining years.

In works of neighborly kindness, charity, and kindly sympathy for the unfortunate, this worthy couple are deserving of emulation, and the town's history would be incomplete without special mention of them. "SLOCUM."

Since the above sketch was sent in to the Publisher, we learn that the Captain's wife, Elizabeth (Sampson) Bisbee, died Mar. 10, 1899. PUBLISHER.

SETH STURTEVANT,

ONE OF GEN. WASHINGTON'S LIFE GUARD.

"I was born in Halifax, Plymouth County, Mass., June 4, 1760. My parents were of Scotch descent and were common farmers, with whom I lived until I was sixteen years old. The Revolutionary spirit run so high that I entered the service at sixteen, in the year 1776, in Capt. James Harlow's company at Plympton, of Col. Cary's regiment of Bridgewater.

"I enlisted for five months, marched to New York, was present at the time of the fight on Long Island, made a retreat from New York when the British took the city, Sept. 16, 1776, served out the five months and received a discharge on the 1st of December, 1776.

"1777, June 6, second enlistment, for three years. Capt. Amos Cogswell's Company, Col. James Wesson's Regiment, Gen. Arnold's Brigade of Massachusetts. We marched from Boston and joined Gen.

SETH STURTEVANT.
One of General Washington's bodyguards.

Gates' Army at Stillwater in the state of New York. Was in the Battle of the 7th October, 1777, when we gained a complete victory over the British army under the command of Burgoyne, and was present at the surrender of his army ten days after the Battle. This surrender was on the 17th of Oct., 1777. A good haul upon the British Boys of over 6,000 men.

"About the first of November in this year, marched with Gen. Gates' army to Pennsylvania at a place called White Marsh, a long tedious march, suffered greatly for shoes, clothes and provisions. Some of the soldiers died on the way and some were obliged to leave on account of their sufferings.

"At White Marsh we joined Gen. Washington's grand army and soon after our whole army marched to Valley Forge, about thirty miles from Philadelphia, on the Schuylkill river, where we built huts and wintered.

"Gen. Washington divided his men into parties of twelve, and ordered each party to build a hut for its own accommodation. These rude structures, sixteen feet long and fourteen feet wide, with walls six and a half feet high, were built of logs and lined with clay, with rough chimneys. The officers' quarters were like these, but a little larger. The weather became bitterly cold and the sufferings almost beyond endurance. Both Washington and Congress were powerless to provide new clothing. Our bare feet were through our worn-out shoes, nearly naked from the tattered remains of our only pair of stockings, our breeches hanging in strings, our faces thin from hunger, and a forsaken look on all. The horses died of starvation, and the men harnessed themselves to sleds and hauled their wood and scanty provisions.

“Surely we, who enjoy the blessings of Liberty, will remember the terrible winter at Valley Forge, 1778.

“About the first of April I was transferred from this Regiment to Gen. Washington’s Life Guard, commanded by Caleb Gibbs, Major, belonging to Massachusetts, William Livingston of New York, Captain, William Colfax of Connecticut, 1st Lieutenant, John Grimes of Virginia, 2d Lieutenant, — Edwards of Connecticut, 3d Lieutenant, — Notch of Virginia, 2d Sargent, — Harris of Connecticut, 3d Sargent, — Young of Virginia, 4th Sargent, — Jones of Virginia, 5th Sargent, Seth Sturtevant of Massachusetts, 1st Corporal, Ephraim Eddy of Massachusetts, 2d Corporal, — Forbes of Rhode Island, 3d Corporal, — Randolph of Virginia, 4th Corporal, — Law of Connecticut, 5th Corporal. All told, one hundred and fifty Rank and File.

“Headquarters remained at Valley Forge until the British army evacuated Philadelphia in June, and then Gen. Washington pursued the British army and overtook them at Monmouth, New Jersey, on the 28th of June, where a severe battle was fought. Gen. Washington’s army had the pre-eminence, causing the British to retreat to Sandy Hook at night, where they went on board of their shipping which carried them to the city of New York.

“ Seventy-two of the Life Guard, myself among the number, were detached to Col. Morgan’s Reg. of Riflemen, as a Flank Guard at the Battle of Monmouth. Gen. Washington’s army then marched up the west side of the Hudson river and crossed the ferry to White Plains, New York. I remained in the Life Guard until my three-years’ enlistment had expired, when I received an honorable discharge. The following is a copy: .

"Soon after Peace was made I married Miss Abigail Cushing of Duxbury, Mass., by whom I had three children, in Massachusetts, one of them died and I moved my family from Halifax, Plymouth County, Mass., on to the Province of Maine to West Butterfield, now Sumner, 20th of July, 1795. Two years later my honored mother, Joanna Sturtevant, came to live with me. She died May 11, 1815, aged 79 years, and was buried at East Sumner.

"1802, April 22, I was baptised by immersion and joined the Baptist church at Buckfield, May 22. I had two children born in this County."

"I have outlived my wife and all of my children but one. I lived in Sumner 55 years. I am living in Hartford with my only living child, Martha, wife of Capt. Hopestill Bisbee.

"I write this statement of my life at the age of 87 years. With the few dates kept while in the service it has been written from memory and without the aid of glasses.

"I wish well to my Country's good."

HISTORICAL SKETCH

— BY —

SHARON ROBINSON.

(Condensed from Lewiston Evening Journal of June 11, 1898.)

Barney Jackson and wife were the first white couple that spent the night in what is now the town of Sumner, and they pitched their camp near the present residence of Capt. Lewis Bisbee. They did not, however, locate permanently in town. Michael Kinley made the first clearing, but was not a permanent resident. The first permanent family was Noah Bosworth's, who moved from Plympton, Mass., probably about 1782. This place is now occupied by H. S. Palmer. The second family was Daniel Oldham's from Pembroke, Mass., who located on the place so long known as the Russell farm, and now occupied by H. B. Cobb. The third family was Charles Ford's, also from Pembroke, and is the farm now occupied by Thomas Stephens. As to the fourth family it is not certain.

- The fifth family to move into the new settlement was William Hayford's of Pembroke, who located upon the place now occupied by A. Pomeroy. The sixth family was Increase Robinson's, also from Pembroke, Mass., who moved to what is now East Sumner in 1783 and erected a cabin, and the next season built the first saw mill, and shortly afterwards built the first framed house in town, which is still in good condition and occupied by two of his great-grandchildren. The original site of the mill is occupied as a saw mill. A few years later a grist mill was built near by and operated many years, but the last relics were consumed by fire in 1871. These mills were operated until the advent of the fourth generation by the Robinsons. Dea. Sharon Robinson of the third generation used to tend both mills at the same time by starting the old "up and down" saw in a log, and then hurrying into the grist mill to attend to that, thus running from one mill to the other. He has ground many bushels of corn, loaded it by night upon a horse-sled and hauled it with one horse to Portland market, a distance of over fifty miles. It took three days to make the trip. The farmers used to bring, usually, a half bushel of corn or rye on their shoulders.

The seventh family was Charles Bisbee's, also of Pembroke, Mass., who located upon the farm now occupied by Capt. Lewis Bisbee. Some of the seventh generation still reside upon the farm, (children of Lewis Spaulding). Charles Bisbee moved from Massachusetts in 1783, coming in a sailing vessel to Freeport, Me., thence to Sumner with all his effects on the backs of two horses. As all could not ride, the women took their turns in riding. Capt. Lewis and his father, Calvin, each served the town many years as one of the selectmen, and each have represented the town in the State Legislature. Each have been prominent and worthy citizens, always loyal and true.

It will be noticed that quite a portion of the early settlers that came into Sumner were Revolutionary soldiers. This may be partially accounted for by the fact that they were paid off in soldiers' notes, which had but little purchasing value in Massachusetts, but were capable of being used at their full value to purchase lands in the District of Maine. Then many of them had been away from home in the army for years. Some of them might have visited this part of the district while in the service, and at the close of the war were not adverse to making it their permanent home. Another cause of the rapid development of this section after the Revolution was the spirit of speculation which always seems to follow in the wake of every war. Many companies were formed to purchase townships and promote immigration with the expectation of realizing great profits from the future sale of lands after the townships had begun to fill up. It was natural then, as now, for people to want to invest in any new enterprise that gave promise of being a good investment. Massachusetts was fast filling up, and lands were advancing in value continuously, while the District of Maine was very sparsely settled and that confined to places along the coast. Those old heroes of the Revolution did a fine thing for the country after the war in opening up the now noble State of Maine.

From 1782 to 1798 the settlement was called West Butterfield. The first town meeting of Sumner was held Aug. 13, 1798. Following is the warrant:

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

LS

Cumberland ss

To Alvan Robinson of Sumner in said County Greeting.

In persuance of a law of this commonwealth directing me to issue my warrant to some suitable inhabitant of said Sumner.

I do hereby request you forthwith to notify and warn the inhabitants of said Sumner to meet at the dwelling house of Hezekiah Stetson in said Sumner on monday the thirteenth day of August next at ten of the clock in the forenoon then and there to choose all such officers as towns are by law required to choose in the month of March or April annually, and make return of this warrant and your doings thereon to the Moderator and Town Clerk that shall then and there be chosen.

Isaac Sturtevant Just Peace.

Persuant to the foregoing warrant to me directed I hereby notify and warn the inhabitants of the said town of Sumner to meet at the time and place for the purposes therein expressed.

Alvan Robinson.

Sumner, August 13, 1798.

Pursuant to the within warrant to me directed I have notified and warned the inhabitants of the said town of Sumner to meet at the time and place and for the purposes within mentioned.

Alvan Robinson.

The first town officers were as follows:

Moderator, Increase Robinson.

Clerk, Alvan Robinson.

Selectmen and assessors, Benjamin Heald, Increase Robinson, Simeon Barrett.

Treasurer, Joseph Robinson.

Collector, John Briggs. (at 25cts. per pound). Increase Robinson was his bondsman.

Surveyor of highways, Meshack Keen, Benj. Heald, Alvan Robinson.

Surveyor of boards, plank and shingles, Timothy Cobb.

Surveyor of staves and hoops, Jonas Coburn.

Fence viewers, Noah Bosworth, Enoch Hall, Wm. Hayford.

Thythingmen, Joshua Foord, Isaiah Cushman.

Sealers of leather, Isaac Sturtevant, Alvan Robinson.

Deer-reeves, Benj. Heald, Levi Crockett.

Hog-reeves, John Bisbee, Noah Bosworth, Jr., Increase Robinson, Jr.

Field drivers, John Crockett, Jr., Wm. Tucker, Wm. Hayford.

Pound keeper, Hezekiah Stetson.

At a meeting held two weeks later (Aug. 27), voted to allow the road laid out from Joseph Robinson's to Simeon Parlin's, also to allow the road from the mills to John Briggs', also the road from Asa Robinson's to Isaac Bonney's. The road first mentioned is that now leading from W. H. Downs' to Hiram H. Buck's. The second leads from East Sumner to H. C. Buck's. The third is the road from Sumner Corner to John H. Bonney's. (Old Buckfield road.)

The town also voted that Elisha Bisbee shall build a pound for nine dollars. April 1, 1799, Alvan Robinson, Benjamin Heald and Isaac Bonney were chosen the first school committee of the town. Voted $100 to be expended for schools. At a subsequent meeting a discussion arose as to the place where publishment of parties intending marriage should be posted: For some time no agreement could be made, when finally Increase Robinson, Jr., (then unmarried), made a motion that the notices should be posted on Seth Allen's hog-stye, (an out of the way place at the end of the lane). The motion prevailed and singularly enough, the author of the motion was the next one to be published and his intentions were literally carried out.

The first white male child born was Charles Ford. The first white female child was Rebecca Robinson who married Cyrus Thompson, esq., of Hartford.

The first death was that of a man named Beals who was buried near where A. W. Horton resides. The first schoolhouse stood near the same spot, the timbers of which now constitute Capt. Bisbee's woodhouse.

The first store (if such it may be called) was kept at Deacon Increase Robinson's who also made and sold cooper ware. In an old account book of the deacon's the most frequent charges are—"a peck of corn," "a peck of rye," "2 quarts of rum."

The first blacksmith shop was located near where Asa Robinson now resides, and Asa Robinson, 1st, was the smith. In those days each customer had to furnish his own iron and steel and sometimes the coal. Except in very icy traveling, horses and oxen were not shod except the doctor's and minister's horses.

The first doctor was Micah Allen, located near Jefferson Russell's present abode.

The first potatoes grown in town were raised on the Bosworth place now occupied by Horace S. Palmer. Some of the timber of the first barn is now a part of Palmer's woodhouse.

Levi Cushman was the youngest prisoner of the Revolutionary war, (a son of Dea. Isaiah Cushman). He was about two years old when liberated.

The first cast iron plow was brought from Massachusetts by Isaiah Cushman and sold on trial to Elisha Bisbee on condition that it plow a certain rocky piece of land without breaking. It was tried and stood the test.

On Capt. Lewis Bisbee's barn are boards that were twitched by oxen through the woods by spotted trees from Buckfield, a distance of nearly two miles. The boards then were sawed by an upright saw and were not split apart at one end until needed.

The first meetinghouse was erected on Sumner Hill in 1819. Some of the timber is now doing service in the Congregational church on the hill.

In 1802 a Congregational church was formed and had various supplies until 1812, when Rev. Samuel Sewell of Bath was called to be pastor, a position he retained until 1845.

Probably the first public religious meetings were held at the home of Dea. Increase Robinson in 1783.

For several years a few faithful disciples met here and worshiped according to the custom of those days, until the first log schoolhouse was erected, when public services were held there. Meetings on the Sabbath were thus maintained in those rude huts and old "family kitchens" until the first Congregational church was erected on Sumner Hill in 1819.

SUMNER'S FIRST CHURCH.

This old meeting house did duty until 1854, when it was taken down and rebuilt near Parson Sewall's residence, where it still is in use for regular Sabbath services.

The Baptist people, however, settled the first minister, Elder Macomber, who received the grant of land given to the town's minister. This land, however, was afterward given back, and the proceeds of its sale still constitute a permanent fund, the interest of which is divided annually among the several religious societies in town. The Baptists have been supplied by various pastors among which were Joseph Palmer, who labored for years preaching at different schoolhouses in town and other places. On March 20, 1833, Elder Manassah Lawrence moved into town and began a faithful ministry which continued until 1858, a pastorate of twenty-five years. The church numbered when he came fifty-one members. When he left it numbered one hundred and thirty-three.

Various societies have sprung up in town and flourished more or less at different periods of the town's history, but the only societies that have erected church edifices are the Congregational, Baptist and Universalist, of which to-day the Congregational has two, the Baptist two, and Universalist one, making five church buildings kept in good repair and regular Sabbath services held in four of them, and occasional services in the other. This in a rural town of about 900 inhabitants may show that the town is not lacking in love and respect for moral and religious observances. There are at present three Y. P. S. C. E. societies in town that meet weekly. The first Sabbath school was organized in town in or about the year 1832, by the Rev. Asa Bullard of Boston. Each of the five churches maintain schools, besides additional ones in the summer season.

Originally, the pews in the Baptist church faced the high gallery, and the pulpit back joined the gallery front so that the minister could not see the singers unless he faced about, and only those occupying the front seat in the gallery could see the pulpit.

At the time the church was erected it was considered a fine arrangement, as the occupants of the pews could face the minister, the choir, and see all the late comers and strangers.

The choir in those days was large and frequently filled four long, unpainted wooden benches. Several of the grandchildren of those old singers are now serving in a smaller choir near the minister's right. The old "Carmina Sacra," by Lowell Mason, was the tune book.

The first choir that we can remember was composed of about a dozen persons, none of them young, and was led by Col. James Hersey. After the minister had finished reading one of Watts' hymns, the colonel would announce Barby, Marlow or Rockingham as the case demanded. Then after a tremulous far-sol-la, all hands would sing usually four to six verses at a rather slow feed, and usually end half a note, or more, below the key note. No anthems, or set pieces ever greeted our ears then. The sacred music then was of a doleful slow cast and not calculated to awaken much enthusiasm. Things went on in this way until one winter a Mr. Bonney taught a singing school, after which a new choir was organized with John Conant as leader. Then came quite a change. New singing books were introduced and the music was of a more lively order. About this time instrumental music by way of fiddles and bass viol came into use here. Greenleaf Conant and Stephen Heald, who had sustained the alto part in singing, were taken out and learned to manipulate the fiddle and bass viol. Bradford Bisbee also assisted. It seemed to our boyish mind that the music had reached the climax of perfection. Mr. Conant, the chorester, was of a quick and impulsive nature, and there was some jingle in the selections. How we used to stand at a safe and respectful distance and gaze with open mouth and dilated eyes to the music and wonder if we should ever get there. The singing book was the Old Psalter, and many of the closing pieces are still fresh in mind. How I delighted to tell about our singing. Why, I honestly thought it could not be excelled by anybody.

Singing was becoming an important factor in church services. Mr. Conant led the choir for several years, and after his removal Milton Hersey led the singing for a while, and as he was our first Sabbath school teacher, we thought he was hard to beat. After Mr. Hersey came our well known and efficient chorester, Stephen C. Heald, who commenced in that capacity while but a youth of twenty-one and served many years.

The first established mail route through Sumner started from Buckfield, came up past Capt. Bisbee's over Sumner Hill to Esq. Barrett's, then back by East Sumner, and through Hartford to Canton. One trip a week was made, and this mail was usually carried on horseback. The driver blew a trumpet before passing houses, as some of the settlers used to pay him a trifle to deliver their mail, and carry letters to the office for them.

Simeon Barrett, esq., was the first postmaster. Later on, as the town became thicker settled, another office was established at the east part of the town, then known as "Sumner Corner," where Dr. Bethuel Cary was postmaster for many years. After the Buckfield Branch railroad was extended to East Sumner, the office was removed to the Flat near the mills, where it is now kept.

But years before this latter event took place an office was established at Abel Fletcher's and one at West Sumner, in place of the one at Esq. Barrett's. The mail route then started from Paris Hill, came through Sumner over the hills to East Sumner, through Hartford, Canton to Canton Point, the terminus. One trip per week only. Yet the entire week's mail for all the section traversed was not nearly as heavy as one of the two daily mails that now arrive at East Sumner. Probably the number of Lewiston Weekly Journals that arrive every Thursday P. M. at East Sumner exceeds all the weekly newspapers then delivered over the entire route for the week. A few copies of the "Christian Mirror," "Portland Advertiser," "Eastern Argus," and "Oxford Democrat," were taken by the "wealthy" families, and that was about all. Postage rates on letters coming from Massachusetts were eighteen and three-fourths cents, requiring an old nine pence and "four-pence-happeney" to make the change. Not many years ago subscribers to weekly newspapers had to pay twenty cents annually for postage. "Uncle Sam" will now carry nine letters to California or Oregon as cheap as he used to carry one to Boston.

In a recent interview with Sumner's oldest citizen, "Uncle Abe" Fletcher, we inquired as to the first militia company in town. He thinks the first company was organized by Joshua Carpenter, but is unable to give the date. Two annual "trainings," as they were called, were required, one in May and the other before the annual "field muster." These musters were held in East Hebron and Paris, and were the leading events of the year. Each soldier must appear with an equipment consisting of two spare flints, powder horn, bullets, primer, etc.

After the great temperance movement in the "thirties," an independent company called the Sumner and Hartford Rifle Company was formed, made up mainly of young men and total abstinence men. This was a uniformed company and such a uniform now would make a good target for the foe. They evidently believed in supporting the colors as the gaudy outfit consisted of bright red pants, light green coats with two rows of bright brass buttons on the waist several inches apart, with bright yellow braid across from one button to the other. And the head gear would have made a Comanche Indian turn green with envy. A tall straight stove-pipe hat without rim except in front, surmounted by a tall fountain feather plume of white feathers tipped with red, and then the victim was ready for—gore.

The annual trainings were usually held at "Sumner Flat," the only piece of smooth land big enough to turn a company on with safety. The writer has, since those gala days, wept bitter tears of sorrow and anguish while pulling barn grass and pig weed upon the same soil where this gaily bedecked military company performed their evolutions.

Perhaps it was the patriotic spirit engendered by this gay dashing company that caused in after years nearly one hundred men to don the uniform of blue and go from the town to battle for the national colors of red, white and blue. The band of music consisted of a snare drum, bass drum and fife. In our remembrance of those bright letter days "Uncle Bill" Rice pounded the big drum, Ephraim Gammon, late of Mechanic Falls, rattled the small drum and squealed the fife.

"To be a Roman in those days, was better than to be a King."

After the formation of uniformed light infantry companies, the old militia-men were called "string bean" companies. It was said that, at the first trainings of the old militia, it was customary to make a large X on the cowhide worn on the left foot, hence the order when about to march—"Chalk foot forward—march."

In the early times each town was obliged to keep on deposit in some safe place a quantity of powder and shot ready for an emergency. Sumner's powder house stood on the common near the old Congregational church.

The list of Sumner's soldiers* is compiled from the adjutant general's report and other available sources. Of course such a list, prepared 33 years after the close of the war, and made up in part from the memory of some of our aged citizens, may not be absolutely correct, but we think the list is very nearly if not quite complete. Old Sumner has a noble record for loyalty and patriotism, and many of her sons laid down their lives for a noble and victorious cause. It requires annually about 100 flags to mark the last resting places of her honored dead, including the Revolutionary and 1812 heroes.

In the early days of the first settlers, New England rum was considered indispensable at weddings, funerals, marriages and births, also at sheep washings and shearings. People then did not have to visit Maine lakes and brooks in fly time in order to "take a smile." It was used freely and no attempt at disguise.

* See Appendix O.

It was kept at grocery stores and in nearly all families and with such frequent use the quality must have been much better than the present vile, forty-rod, crazy compounds. Occasionally an old or middle aged man would be seen coming from the grocery with a little too much New England in one jug to balance the molasses in the other and it was a trifle difficult to balance the gait. Quite different from the present time, it was a rare sight to see a young man "plumb full" and boisterous. Even the minister was expected to take a "smile" when he went to comfort the afflicted or kiss the bride. When the first "old Orthodox" minister, Parson Sewall, was installed, stands were erected where gingerbread and new rum were dispensed with a gospel flavoring and relish. Sumner was not unlike other towns in this regard, but for the past half century few towns in the State have been so free from the blighting curse of intemperance as old Sumner.

In a recent interview with Capt. Bisbee, whose statements are always taken without salt, he remarked the freedom of the town from a bad use of alcoholic stimulants.

Referring to the great Washingtonian movement in 1841 the Captain said that "Old Father Hayes" delivered the first temperance lecture at Buckfield on Nov. 6, 1841, and "I signed the pledge and have kept it ever since," a statement which no one will doubt. That movement picked up and saved many old pioneers of that time and the signers of the pledge generally kept the pledge.

Let us here state an incident that shows the power and efficacy of a Christian mother's example. Many years ago at Sumner Corner, which was then the "Hub" of a large territory, "Uncle Nat Briggs" kept a small grocery, and of course, the chief necessary of life was New England rum, which was then hauled by horse power from Portland. It was dispensed freely to all that had the usual "three cents," and those who lacked the necessary fund, did chores, handled potash ashes and did sundry jobs to procure the "nipper." Within a stone's throw of this grogshop lived "Uncle Asa" Robinson, son of Dea. Increase Robinson. Asa and "Aunt Margaret" reared a family of nineteen children and many of the boys were brought up right under the shadow of the retailer's shop, and strange to state, not one of them ever became addicted to the use of liquors. Every one of them grew up a staunch, total abstinence man, and all but two have passed away and all kept the faith. Adoniram Judson and Lucius still live and are inveterate haters of rum and tobacco. Their mother early taught them to touch not the accursed thing.

After the Washingtonian movement came the Temperance Watchmen Club, which flourished in its day and had a good support.

In 1869, March 3d, Dr. William Lapham of Augusta instituted Invincible Lodge of Good Templars, which has had phenomenal success. Its roll of members shows nearly five hundred names, which is more than one-half of the present population of the town. It still lives, owns a good hall and has a library of over 3,000 volumes.

To-day, an intoxicated resident of the town would be a rare sight. If such sickening sights are ever seen, it is usually a young man who drives through the place and carries the "critter" with him. Drunken brawls and street riots are comparatively unknown, and still they occur in smaller towns than this. The general sentiment of the town is for law and order, and loyalty to the government.

The only instance of anything like a mob or riot occurred more than half a century ago. A certain man of doubtful repute was generally supposed to be living an intimate and dissolute life with his sisters, and the people becoming disgusted with the affair decided to rid the town of his presence. As gentle hints did not avail they decided to procure an "all rail" line for him with a complimentary ticket for him to Buckfield. As this occurred before the days of the steel rail, no other method seemed to be available but a wood fence rail. They went by night, and kindly made up the train at his door and invited the victim to a free ride, giving him the preference of the center seat on the carriage. They assisted their honored guest to the best seat, and the train started and did not stop at way stations until the conductor whispered "Buckfield." As this was the terminus of the line the train stopped, the victim dismounted and the train men after taking—water(?) started home. The company only made one trip, as it proved effectual. Some of the leading citizens helped make up the party, and for neatness and dispatch it eclipsed the old F. O. J. Smith line, and made better time.

When Tabitha Bisbee, sister of Capt. Bisbee's father, was married to William Brown, Parson Scott came up from New Gloucester to perform the nuptials and received for his fee one bushel of rye, which he carried home with him on his back. Capt. Bisbee also states that his grandfather brought salt upon his back from New Gloucester to salt down two moose. During the first winter in town the family subsisted largely on moose, bear, deer, ducks and partridge.

Sumner has made a home for a score or more of ministers, but a lawyer has never tried to starve in town.

Several physicians have at various times lived and practiced in town. Dr. Micah Allen was the first, then followed Drs. Conant, Adams, Cary, Comstock, Faunce, Wight, Bisbee, Andrews, and Robinson.

Early in the history of the town the citizens showed their desire for more liberal education of their children than they had enjoyed. In the same season when the town was incorporated when the list of voters numbered less than thirty, the town voted $100 for schools, making a per capita tax of over $3 each, a much larger sum for each than the amount now raised by vote of the town for each inhabitant to bear.

For years, and until the district system was abolished, the town maintained 17 districts with 16 schools. The town has sent many pupils to Hebron Academy, several to Edward Little Institute, Auburn, and quite a number to the Normal School at Farmington. Four pupils from the town graduated last season from the latter school.

Several pupils from the town graduated at Colby and Bowdoin, and others are still pursuing their college course, or fitting for future entry.

While the town cannot boast any fine school buildings as larger and wealthier towns can show, yet the desire and importance of good school facilities is felt. Improvements are continually going on in methods of instruction, and the town ranks well with rural country towns.

In brief, the early settlers evidently believed in the importance and necessity, for their future welfare, of churches and schools.

BENJAMIN HEALD and DESCENDANTS.

A history of the Healds, as connected with the early settlement of Sumner, began in the person of Benjamin Heald, who came from Carlisle, Mass., about the year 1784, then a young man about twenty years of age.

Possibly a year or two after Benjamin Heald took up his residence in what is now the town of Sumner, he married Rebekah Spaulding. They began their life together on Sumner Hill, near to where the present Heald farm buildings now stand.

The farm is very nicely located, commanding a good view of Pleasant Lake and the surrounding country, and is considered one of the most desirable and productive farms in town.

Mr. Swift is also a lover of fine cattle, carries a large stock, and deals quite extensively in them.

THE TURNER FAMILY.

CHARLES TURNER settled in Sumner about 1830, on a farm adjoining the Ryerson farm on the north, Sturtevant farm on the west, and Hersey farm on the south. He married Eliza Briggs of North Salem, Maine, and there were born to them nine children, of whom only three are now living, John and Horatio G. who are the oldest, and Eliza, who married A. M. Mr. Turner was a member of the Charlestown School-board the five years previous to annexation to Boston. He represented Ward 4, Boston, in the Legislature in 1877 and 1878. He was Treasurer

They each served eight years on the board of selectmen of the town. Each represented their district in the State Legislature one term, and Benjamin was County Commissioner for three years. CAPT. HOPESTILL BISBEE.

Capt. Hopestill Bisbee, a likeness of whom is shown on page 123, was the third son of Elisha Bisbee of Sumner. He was in the war of 1812. He was a man whose youth was not blessed with the advantages of education, yet who possessed native ability, and always had at heart an interest for schools, anxious for the coming generation to extend its usefulness by education. He was a citizen of public spirit, interested in all matters pertaining to the welfare of his town, and was often selected as an appraiser of estates.

At the time the great temperance movement which was sweeping over the country made its appearance he became one of its chief promoters, establishing what was then known as the "Washingtonian Society."

When an Abolitionest was almost an outlaw, he championed the cause of anti-slavery. On this question he had no doubts. Early he had espoused the cause of universal freedom and the extirpation of chattel slavery.

In season and out of season he spoke against this national sin, and contributed from his means to the practical solution of the question, as the anti-slavery societies and the poor negro could testify. For seven years he voted with five other citizens who desired freedom to all. He lived to see the day of the emancipation of the negro race in our country.

Through his industry and good management he made his home one of the finest farm residences in the vicinity, an ornament to the town. Not the least among its attractions was the influence of music which pervaded the home circle. He was a fine bass singer. We can, even now, remember how, with rapt attention, we listened to the sweet tones of his voice, and the clear, high soprano of our mother, in the "Anthem for Easter," "Lift up your Heads, Eternal Gates," and "The Heavenly Vision." They were leading musical characters in their day, and long stood in the church choir.

The fine row of maples near the homestead were set by him. His family are all now dead, except the youngest daughter, "the last leaf on the tree."

Interred in the family lot at Hartford Center, once East Butterfield, rest the remains of Capt. Hopestill Bisbee and his wife.

ELISHA BISBEE, JR. and FAMILY.

Elisha Bisbee, Jr., born May 8, 1786, married Joanna Sturtevant of Sumner, by Isaac Sturtevant, Esq., her father, April 15, 1810. He lived for a short time in Buckfield Village, and then exchanged his stand there with Zebediah Austin for the farm on Sumner Hill, which is still owned by his descendants. The farm is pleasantly located on an eminence which commands a fine view of the White Mountains, Labrador Pond and the surrounding country north and west. He served the town several years, as Treasurer, and was also several times a member of the board of selectmen. He was noted as a man of sound judgment and strict integrity. He had five children by his first wife. Three grew to man- and woman-hood.

Elbridge G., born in Buckfield, Feb. 8, 1811, died Oct. 2, 1812; Thomas J. and George W., twins, born in Buckfield, July 6, 1812.

Thomas J. married, in June 1840, Sylvia Stetson of Sumner, and moved to Rumford, where he became a prosperous farmer, holding town offices for many years. They had one daughter.

George W., a likeness of whom appears on page 117, married, Jan. 1, 1830, Mary B. Howe of Rumford. He commenced business for himself as a blacksmith, in Hartford, where, with his public spirited wife, he did much to sustain the ministry, and entertain those who came from the country around. Stable accommodations were essential, this also was provided without pay.

Mrs. Bisbee was one of the first ladies of the town, President of the Daughters of Freedom, and Vice President of the Ladies' Temperance Band. Her musical talent made her welcome on all occasions. She was a model house-wife, a well informed woman, and beloved by all her neighbors and acquaintances. They had one son; while yet a lad the father removed with his family to Peru, where he died.

Mary P., born June 6, 1815, married Freeman Reed, of Hartford, and had five children. Their last years were lived in Massachusetts. Both died the same week and were brought to Canton, Me., for burial.

Elisha Jr.'s first wife died Jan. 30, 1825. For second wife, he married Fannie Bryant of Sumner, born June 12, 1816, died May 10, 1869. They had nine children. Of these,

Sabra W., born Feb. 21, 1826, married Orville Robinson, then of Hartford, since of Peru. He engaged in farming, and through enterprise and careful management became one of the foremost and thrifty farmers in town. They had two children. Mr. Robinson died several years ago, and his wife lives with their son on the Peru homestead.

Sophia G., born April 7, 1827, is now resident owner of the Elisha Bisbee homestead, which is one of the most attractive residences in Sumner. She never married. She won honors to herself in caring for her aged parents in their last days, and in the bringing up of the six young children that were left in her care.

Levi Bradford, born July 16, 1828, married, May 18, 1852, Eliza A. Heald of Sumner, and removed to Belfast, Maine. They had eight children. Early in life he learned the carpenter's trade, and followed carpentering and shop-joinery until 1861, when he enlisted, at the first call, in the 4th Maine Volunteers. Enlisted as a private. After the first battle at Bull Run, July 21, 1861, he was promoted, July 22, 1861, to Sargent Major, after which, to Lieutenant and Captain. He took part in the following engagements: First Battle of Bull Run, in which engagement he was severely wounded; Siege of Yorktown, Battle of Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, Seven Pines, Charles City Cross Roads, and Malvern Hill. He was many times detailed with his company for special service, and his promotions speak for his abilities as an officer in the war. He has an honorable discharge, and receives a pension for disabilities contracted while in the U. S. Service. After the war he removed to his native town, built the first store at East Sumner, and went into trade; also dealt in wood, bark and lumber, shipping via R. R. to Portland and other points; later sold out the business and rented the store which was burned without insurance. He had charge of bridge building for the Portland and Oxford Central R. R. Co. In 1877 he went to Virginia City, Nevada, and engaged in mining and mill-wright work. In 1885 he was at Araconda, Montana, engaged on the Araconda Copper Milling Works, and returned home in 1886.

Capt. Bisbee has done most faithful work in collecting dates and facts of interest, of the Bisbee family and their connections, and putting them in convenient form for this work. He will have the thanks of the present generation, and its value will increase as the years go by.

Elisha S., born in Sumner, April 15, 1830; married Martha J. Parsons of Hartford. He was a beautiful type of manhood, a man of sound judgment, and a practical, thrifty and successful farmer. He was esteemed by his fellow citizens for his many good qualities of mind and heart. They had three children. He died Mar. 28, 1897, on the Bisbee homestead.

Asia H. born Jan. 6, 1832, went to California in 1854, and later went to Portland, Oregon, engaged in mining, married, and died at Portland, Oregon, in 1875, leaving two sons.

Daniel H., born in Sumner, Oct. 9, 1833, went to California in 1854, worked at placer-mining, removed to Virginia City, Nevada, engaged in mill-wright work, and later as foreman and superintendent for the Mining and Smelting Co., for the reduction of mineral ore, for about thirty years. He had the handling of many millions of dollars' worth of bullion. He returned to Maine in 1889, and died in Auburn, Oct. 13, 1891. He had three children.

Jane Y., born July 1, 1835, married James McDonald, Oct. 1, 1855.

Hopestill R., born in Sumner, June 21, 1837, went to California in 1855, engaged in mining, later removed to Virginia City, Nevada, and engaged in mill-wright work, as master builder. As a mechanic he was rated among the first, and built some of the finest mill-works for milling mineral ore in the West. He returned to his native town in 1872, and removed to Auburn, where he now resides, and enjoys his vacations in his "cottage by the sea." He married Ella Byram, Sept. 14, 1871, at Virginia City, Nevada, and they have had four children.

H. Petition for Incorporation of West Butterfield, with the River as dividing line.

To the Hon: the Senate and the Hon House of Representatives in General Court assembled

We the Subscribers your petitioners inhabitants of the plantations of Butterfield by this our humble petition beg leave to represent. That when the proprietors purchased the two tracts or townships of Land known by the name of Butterfield of the Commonwealth, there was then twenty nine Settlers living on the west side of the east branch of twenty mile river so called within the limits of Said townships said river running nearly north and south through Said towns. That twenty one of said Settlers settled under the Commonwealth the other eight purchased their land of the proprietors. that when the proprietors loted out said townships they ran a rang line north and south through town between the settlers and loted said towns from said line declaring said line to be the division line of said towns. turning twenty two settlers into the west town the other seven being some of both the aforesaid description with the two mills which is all there is in said towns to this day which one of the first settlers built intirely at his cost into the east town that there might be settlers in each town bringing them on the skirts of the same. That on Survaying the plans of each town there appears to be 8365 acres of land more in the east town then there is in the west, that on numbering the inhabitants three fifths of the rateable polls are found in the east town—

Your petitioners therefore concieve it to be a very great hardship that any of the first settlers should be turned over with the mills to the east town, when by making the said east branch of twenty mile river the division line of said towns when it will lay the towns in as good or better forms then the said rang line will which may be seen by viewing the plan and equally divide the settlers and give the east town then 4475 acres the most, and as the same proprietors ownes both towns it cannot be injurious to them

Your petitioners therefore pray the Hon: legislature to take this our petition into their wise consideration, and incorporate the west plantation of Butterfield into a distinct town by the name of ————— by the boundaries accompanying this petition making the said east branch of twenty mile river the dividing line of said towns that the west town may have its share of settlers and land and save some of the settlers one half of their travel to do publick business

As in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray

I. Petition for Incorporation of both Plantations as one Town.

To the Honorable Senate and house of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, The Petition and Remonstrance of us the Subscribers, Inhabitants of the Plantation of East Butterfield, in the County of Cumberland. Humbly Sheweth

That, whereas there is a Petition before the Honorable Court, for incorporating the said Plantations into two distinct Towns, we are not able to reconcile our minds to the proposal for the present; but should much prefer their being both incorporated together at present into one Town, in order to remedy the great evils we suffer for want of incorporation. our principal reasons, and which we think to be weighty, are, that there are scarcely Eighty Families in both the Plantations, and as to many, especially in East Butterfield, their settlements are very new, and their improvements small. it is our Sentiment therefore that the People are not at present sufficiently able to bear the expense and burden of two distinct incorporations. we have no doubt but it will be most proper and convenient that the two Plantations Should be formed into two Towns, in some future Period; but think we are not at present equal to the Task of supporting them. We beg leave further to represent, that whereas some among us have it in contemplation that about three thousand Acres of Land with a number of families thereon, Should be taken off from East Butterfield and incorporated with West Butterfield, if this should take effect, the remainder of East Butterfield, with its present small improvements, would form an incorporation of very Slender abilities indeed; or otherwise, would remain under all the disadvantages attending an unincorporated Place. On the whole, as it appears to us that two distinct Incorporations, or any plan, under existing circumstances would be attended with greater inconveniences than that of travelling to Town meetings, in the Common Center, of the two Plantations, and others mentioned in the Petition for two Incorporations, Our Humble Petition and prayer therefore is that the Honorable General Court would be pleased to take the Ideas we have Suggested, together with the other matters relative to the Subject, into their wise consideration, and incorporate East and West Butterfield into one Town: and as in duty bound shall ever pray

K. Petition for Incorporation of East Butterfield, with the River as dividing line.

To the Honourable Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled— Most Humbly Sheweth, that your petitioners inhabitants of the plantation of East Butterfield in the County of Cumberland being a part of two tracts or townships of land granted to Mr Ebenezer Bancroft and others that your petitioners having taken into thire Consideration the reasons alledged in a petition of the inhabitants of west Butterfield so Called praying your Honnours to incorporate them into a distink Town making the East branch of twenty mile river the deviding line between the Said East and west Butterfields-- upon mature deliberation all circumstances considered your petitioners think it to be an equitable division of inhabitants and land as that of the Proprietors & that many of the inhabitants are better accomadated then they will be by the proprietors line being desireous to put an end to any further dispute on the matter and to get our plantation incorporated— your petitioners pray your Honners to tak this our petition in to your wise consideration and incorporate the Said East Butterfield into a destinct Town by the name of W^{ms} Ston— and the boundaries accompanying this petition making the Said East branch of twenty mile river the division line of the Said Butterfields as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray—

L. Joint Petition for Incorporation as Two Towns.

To the Hon Senate and Houfe of Representatives in General Court afsambled

We the Subscribers inhabitants of the plantations of East and west Butterfield in the County of Cumberland being two townships of land known by the names of N^o 6: and N^o 7 Containing 45525 acres which was conveyed to M^r Ebenezer Bancroft and others by the Committe for the Sale of eastern lands on the 22^d day of Novem^r 1787—

In behalf of ourselves and the inhabitants who have deputed us by this our humble petition beg leave to lay our grievances before the Hon: legislature

Some of the inhabitants of the said plantations have for more then fifteen years and others for a shorter term been labouring under all the inconveniences that attend unincorporated towns untill they have become almost intolerable and while we have been struggling with our difficulties we have for several years been petitioning to have them removed by incorporation but we are so unhappy as not to obtain them yet for reasons unknown to us except it is an opposition that has been made by the proprietors who live many of them out of the Commonwealth whose interest it is to screen their land from town taxes—

Your petitioners beg leave to remonstrate that from the expressions and reservations in the proprietors deed it is evident that the said tracts of land was intended for two townships and they were allways considered as such untill they were blended together in the matter of taxation that all the settlers have had the same held up to their view which they have considered as a valueable privilege: for if they are incorporated together it will by reason of ponds and bogs subject some of the settlers to more then eight miles travel to reach the center of the town—that the proprietors have ever considered them as such and have divided them and layed out a publick right in each town what ever they may hold up to view in the matter of incorporations

Therefore that friendship and good order may pervade all our publick affairs and that the inhabitants of each plantation when incorporated may lay out and make roads and build houses for publick uses in those parts of the towns where they shall be most beneficial to the inhabitants in future—without being harafsed with a party spirit and to prevent any disputes arising in future as to the time and manner of a seperation Your petitioners in behalf of ourselves and our constituents pray the Hon legislature to take this our petition with the papers that accompany it into their wise consideration and remove their embarrassments by incorporating them into two distinct towns by the names of——— By the boundaries sett forth in one of the aforesaid papers as in duty Bound your petitioners will ever pray——
